

Latin American Perspectives on the Urban Century

Planning Challenges and Opportunities

by
Clara Irazábal

The 21st century is the urban century. The share of the world's population living in cities is expected to rise to 80% by 2050, from 55% in 2022.¹ Resource-efficient cities will be critical to managing material consumption and providing quality of life to billions of urban dwellers. Latin American Perspectives (LAP) has contributed to the widening discussion about urban planning in the region, particularly with a few special issues, titled "Urban Latin America: Violence, Enclaves, and Struggles for Land" (2013, Tom Angotti, issue editor) and "Planning Latin American Cities" Parts 2 and 3: "Dependencies and 'Best Practices'" and "Housing and Citizenship" (44:2 and 44:3, 2017; Tom Angotti and Clara Irazábal, issue editors). However, more must be done to shed light on planning challenges and opportunities in the region. At LAP's 50th anniversary, I pose this as a critical task for LAP's future. As Latin America (LA) has one of the most urbanized populations in the world (82%)² and its cities are concentrated in areas of high vulnerability to environmental and climate hazards,³ the mitigation of urban socio-spatial inequality and improvements to sustainability emerge as the most pressing and challenging planning issues for the region.

Urban planning in Latin American cities has been shaped by many factors, including its indigenous heritage, colonial and imperial histories, and, more recently, neoliberalism, rapid urbanization, economic and spatial inequality, neo-imperial dependencies, extractivism, and political corruption and instability. As a result, many Latin American cities face challenges, including poverty eradication and inequality mitigation; climate change and risk adaptation, mitigation, and resilience; intersectoral and interscalar governance; territorial planning and growth management; inclusionary and affordable housing; governance, the rule of law, and inclusion; conviviality and urban security; service provision and management; accessibility and multimodal mobility; neighborhood rehabilitation and preservation; migration integration; and public health.⁴ These planning challenges, however large and seemingly intractable, can and have been turned into opportunities in LA cities. These are some examples:

Current Perspectives In Latin American Urban Research:

Current perspectives in Latin American urban research, 1974 Current Perspectives in Latin American Urban Research Alejandro Portes, Harley L. Browning, 1976 Industrialization and Urbanization in Latin America Robert Gwynne, 2017-10-30 Originally published in 1985 Industrialization and Urbanization in Latin America focuses on the process of industrialisation in Latin America The book links together the distinctive process of industrialisation to wider issues of urban and regional development in Latin America The book looks in detail at the process of industrialisation in Latin America and the spatial ramifications in Latin American industrialisation it argues that industrial growth and its geographical distribution is a principal cause of increasing disparities in income between regions within Latin American countries This book will appeal to academics working in the field of urbanization and geography Urbanization And Urban Policies In Pacific Asia Roland J Fuchs, 2019-09-18 This book is the outcome of the Conference on Population Growth Urbanization and Urban Policies in the Asia Pacific Region held in Honolulu during 8 12 April 1985 It provides wide attention among development planners urban managers and scholars in the field of urban and development planning Urban Research in the Developing World: Latin America Richard E. Stren, 1994 Third World Urbanization J. Abu-Lughod, R. Jr Hay, 2013-07-04 First published in 2006 Despite the growing significance of the Third World and the critical nature of its urbanization there are few synthetic books covering more than one region of the Third World which can be used either by scholars seeking an overview of the process of world urbanization or by students in the growing number of courses now being offered in the field of comparative urbanism The most distressing problem was that the field of urbanization particularly with reference to developing countries seemed to us to have stagnated at theoretically sterile conceptualizations or even worse had deteriorated into fragmented empirical descriptive reports whether observing with sympathy or noting with alarm the rapidly declining condition of individual cities This book attempts to rectify this deficiency Latin American Urbanization Gerald Michael Greenfield, 1994-01-30 This volume provides extensive information on the urban experience in Latin America Following a general overview the work includes chapters devoted to urbanization in specific countries Each chapter begins with an introduction providing geographic information and a survey of the nation's urban development and then includes historical profiles of ninety selected cities as well as maps Thus the work provides both national and city specific perspectives Chapters also provide a list of bibliographic resources and the work is fully indexed Urban Dynamics in Black Africa William J. Hanna, 2017-09-29 Urban Dynamics in Black Africa presents a succession of worlds where we can study the development and the crystallization of major social change The authors trace the development of former villages towns and colonial outposts into major cities within the international community Open air markets continue their trading beside modern department stores as individual Africans create contemporary lives from old and new William J and Judith L Hanna in this unique work introduce new data and the methods of dependency theory class and gender analysis they offer connections between Africa's internal dynamics its legacy of imperialism and the international political and economic arena At the same time the book provides a model for studying the evolution of political institutions Urban Dynamics in Black Africa illustrates how social classes modify and are modified by existing cultural forms The book examines Africa in its independence by contrasting development and dependency role adaptability and conflict in a powerful conceptual matrix Detailing the urban conditions that exist throughout Africa as well as their costs and benefits this work shows how contemporary political conflict in urban Africa is based upon both ethnic and non ethnic ties and how these ethnic and non ethnic ties serve as the bases of a system of political integration unique to poly ethnic communities As a synthesis of the relevant available knowledge on African towns and town dwellers this book is concerned primarily with the effects of external intervention and socioeconomic modernization upon the birth and development of Africa's new towns and the rapid expansion of its old ones It considers the impact of migration and town life upon Africans
