Lecture 1:

I. Consumers use products to help them define their identities in different settings

We use/buy certain things as an extension of our identities. E.g., iPhone

Five changes emerging from our current digital age are presented:

- (1) Dematerialization
- (2) Re-embodiment
- (3) Sharing
- (4) Co-construction of Self
- (5) Distributed Memory

These changes are assessed in terms of implications for our understanding of the self, the nature of possessions, and our relationships with things in a digital world.

Consumer: A person who identifies a need or desire, makes a purchase, and then disposes of the product. Consumers may take the form of organizations or groups.

Many people may be involved in this sequence of events including:

- Purchaser
- User
- Influencer

Consumers impact on marketing strategy.

Market Segmentation: Identifies groups of consumers who are similar to one another in one or more ways and then devises marketing strategies that appeal to one or more groups.

Demographics:

Statistics that measure observable aspects of a population

Ex.: Age, Gender, Family Structure, Social Class and Income, Race and Ethnicity

Consumer Identity as an aid to Marketers

People often conform to society and social norms which help marketers. **

- Consumers segmented by demographics and psychographics
- Consumers understood in part based on their consumption communities and reference groups
- Brands target consumers using market segmentation strategies
- Consumers may choose brands that match with their own identities
