Class Exercise: Fallacies of Relevance Answers

Version 1.1 ©2008 GFDL

Directions: Identify the informal fallacies in the following passages. Choose from the fallacies of ad ignorantiam, ad verecundiam, ad hominem, ad populum, ad misericordiam, and ad baculum.

1. In spite of the best efforts of the scientific establishment, no cure for cancer has been forthcoming. There is no conclusive evidence that cancer can ever be cured. Therefore, I conclude that it is futile to continue spending vast sums of money hoping for a cure when we could be spending that money on cancer prevention.
ad ignorantiam If there is no evidence, then no conclusion can be made.
2. If you ask around you will see that most persons forced to take a foreign language in college find it a useless requirement which is irrelevant in later life. For this reason, universities are ill-advised to continue requiring language credits for the baccalaureate degree.
ad populum If most people believe something is true, it does not logically follow that it is true.
3. Michael Greenby, one of the most erudite fiction writers of the later twentieth century, has recently endorsed the traditional herbal remedies for the effective treatment of rheumatism. Surely the testimony of this great writer is one that all persons with this afflicting disease should consider.
ad verecundiam The testimony of Mr. Greenby is outside his field of expertise. There is no reason to suppose that his opinion on this subject is any better or worse than any other opinion.
4. The administration and staff of this university have issued a press release that the registration process is one of the most efficient in the state. I wouldn't choose to question this claim if I were you since you might not get into any of the classes you register for next semester if word gets out.
ad baculum The reason for the conclusion that the university's registration process is efficient is the threat that harm will come to whomever does not agree.
