

RUNNING A BUSINESS

Adventurers can end up owning businesses that have nothing to do with delving into dungeons or saving the world, however the business may have an affect on your world and its events. If a character decides to maintain a business venture they have acquired, an influential business may allow the player to be regarded as a noble and live an aristocratic lifestyle, a shady business may be discovered and be raised by the locals, and a tavern patron may give the party their next quest. The influence of the business is up to you as a DM.

HOW TO HANDLE A BUSINESS

The player chooses a skill check to represent how they handle their business.

Skill Check	Description
Persuasion	The business is run diplomatically with good business sense.
Performance	The business attracts the populace with spectacles and shows.
Intimidation	The business has a tight grip on its competition and employees.
Deception	The business is shady and tricks the populace into overspending.
Insight	The business predicts the local trends and prices.
Special	The business is unique and has little competition. This may include an Arcane or Herbalist shop. The DM chooses the appropriate skill for the character to roll on the business roll table.

THE RESULT

While spending time on this downtime activity, in addition to maintaining their lifestyle, each week the player running the business rolls on the Running a Business table using the skill check that was chosen for this week.

If the character is required to pay a cost as a result of this table but fails to do so, the business begins to fail. For each unpaid debt incurred in this manner the business takes a -3 penalty to subsequent rolls made on this table.

When a business is run for multiple weeks, multiply the result on the table by the number of weeks. When a business is run for under a week, the number of days it was worked is added to the next time the business is run.

Under certain conditions you as a DM may choose for a player to roll with advantage or disadvantage on the Running a Business check. A festival might increase demand to give the business an advantage, or customers may be too poor to afford its wares, putting the business at a disadvantage.

CREDITS

RUNNING A BUSINESS TABLE

Business Roll	Revenue for this week
4-	They must pay twice the maintenance cost.
5-9	They must pay the maintenance cost.
10-14	The business covers its maintenance cost.
15-19	The business earns a profit equal to the maintenance cost.
20-24	The business earns a profit equal to twice the maintenance cost.
25-29	The business earns a profit equal to thrice the maintenance cost.
30+	The business earns a profit equal to four times the maintenance cost.

BUILDING A BUSINESS

Characters might aspire to owning a large successful business. A character may pay for and prepare the property to run a business at a cost and time detailed on the Business Opportunities table. The size of the property is chosen by the character if that size of property is available for purchase.

A character that wishes to build an extension of their business must acquire the property from an owner by trade or as a gift. Paying for and preparing the extension costs as detailed on the Business Opportunity table subtracted by the construction cost of the business thus far.

If a business is built somewhere where there would not be a populace of sufficient wealth for the business to be run, the business is guaranteed to fail on the Running a Business table.

BUSINESSES OPPORTUNITIES

Property	Maintenance cost per week	Construction Cost
Farm, Market Stand	25 gp	160 gp
Large farm, Large Market Stand	5 gp	400 gp
Massive Farm, Small Shop, Tiny Stage, Tiny Inn	10 gp	800 gp
