

Death on a Roman Cross

A crucified man's heel bone found in a family tomb may refute the belief that having been executed as a criminal, Jesus would not have been given a proper burial. Roman crucifixion took many forms.

Sharp, painful point on seat

The only crucifixion victim ever discovered had a nail driven through his heels.

Iron nails were valuable, so the Romans used ropes more often than nails.

Church tradition says that the Apostle Peter was crucified upside down.

Foot support prolonged death by asphyxiation

Jesus is traditionally depicted with his hands and feet nailed to the cross.
