Cryptika Beneath The Remains:

Cryptika Blix Raven, 2004-12-01 This book is a journey through a disturbed mind vesseled in a very different kinda of poetry Blix Raven allows us to see the darker side of reality from a safe distance Altogether this is a story of a child trying to stay strong in a world of drug abuse and torment Each piece in this collection leads us through visions of the child s dead father haunting him the search for the pit or endless party and many other manifestations of the nightmares and dementia that challenge him

Biochemical analyses of the marine diatom Cyclotella cryptica grown under different nutritional condition for biotechnological applications Antonio Silvestro, 2019-06-15 Research stimulated by curiosity brings out new pieces that make up the puzzle of life and invention provides the tools to assemble and interpret it The Industrial Revolution of past centuries has brought innovations not accompanied by a farsighted vision of the consequences that are manifesting in this globalized twenty first century particularly with an increase in energy demand and global warming The emerging biotechnology revolution which applies technology to biological systems could solve these problems without further deleterious effects if driven by sustainable development Research and development institutes subsidized by governments are looking for renewable and sustainable energy resources that would replace polluting fossil fuels nearly depleted Recently the investigation of the marine microalgae s potential in biotechnological applications is increasing by the realization that the ocean is a relatively untapped source of energy biomass and novel biomolecules Microalgae mainly represent the last generation suitable feedstock for the transport sector but due to their biochemical versatility are useful also for many others industrial fields such as medical pharmaceutical food and cosmetic Nowadays biofuel production from microalgae biomass is still in progress the efficiency of each step during the whole process from culturing to refining needs to be improved to get yield economically reasonable Coupling each other different industrial applications could lead to overcome the substantial investments with proper earnings making hopefully in the next future this living energy source lucrative therefore commercially feasible In the last decades researchers are focusing their attention on Diatoms a taxon of microalgae characterized by silica walls derived from secondary symbiotic event Diatoms are affected by seasonal exponential growth called blooms that place them at the base of the oceans food chain permit about 40% of atmospheric CO₂ fixation and significant influence the biogeochemical cycle of the macronutrients silicon Si nitrogen N phosphorus P This microalgae s group is a promising candidate for biodiesel production because of their great lipid accumulation like reserve storage compound mainly in the form of triacylglycerols TAG converted into biodiesel through a reaction of trans esterification The aim of this thesis were the evaluation of the growth curves and biochemical composition lipids carbohydrates and proteins of the marine diatom Cyclotella Cryptica grown in batch system by administering the average of the standard medium F2 daily or only the day of the inoculation The growth curve were obtained by monitoring daily the cellular density cells mL with an optical microscope combined with a Barker chamber The biological macromolecules quantification lipids carbohydrates and proteins were realized by Folch modified MTBE Dubois and Lowry methods respectively Furthermore the lipids composition were characterized both by Thin Layer Chromatography TLC and Nuclear Magnetic Resonance NMR Eretic method The results shows that the daily supply of the medium f 2 induce high cell density 2250000 77567 cells mL and biomass dry weight 1441 79 148 35 mg L that mainly consist of proteins 88% and lipid fraction is predominantly composed by phospholipids PL Conversely administering the medium f 2 only the first day let the diatoms in a starvation condition defined by a little cell density 192222 26851 and biomass dry weight 205 90 22 24 mg L with a significant increase in the relative amount of storage compounds carbohydrates 19% and lipid 33% predominantly in form of triacylglycerols TAG Typically microalgae are growth at first in laboratories under strict controlled condition in closed photobioreactors and then transferred to open ponds for large scale production

Cytomorphogenesis in Plants Oswald Kiermayer, 2012-12-06 In 1958 E BUNNING published a book in the former series Proto plasmatologia entitled Polarität und ungleiche Teilung des pflanzlichen Protoplasten polarity and unequal division of the plant protoplast in which for the first time results of experimental plant cytomorphogenesis were reviewed This book was based completely on light microscopic observations and rather simple experimental techniques Since then our knowledge of basic cytomorphogenetic mechanisms has greatly increased especially with the introduction of modern ultrastructural biochemical and sophisticated experimental methods so that the field of cytomorphogenesis in our days should be considered a separate discipline within the general field of cell biology This book Cytomorphogenesis in Plants represents a necessary attempt to bring together current knowledge in this field of research on a comparable basis Unfortunately enormous gaps in our understanding of the underlying principles of cytomorphogenetic events still exist Therefore it seemed reasonable to present a book composed of individual chapters each written by experts for a defined experimental system Each chapter represent a separate treatise with its own references hence it was not possible to avoid some overlap both in the text and in the literature of the chapters without destroying the uniformity of the respective article

Microbial Endophytes Charles W. Bacon, James White, 2000-02-25 Examining intercellular infections in certain plant species that lead to a symbiotic relationship between the host and its endophytic microbes this volume demonstrates the ability of many types of endosymbionts acting as a unit with hosts to better survive compete and reproduce Practical applications of such endophytes are also discussed for e

Diatoms F. E. Round, R. M. Crawford, D. G. Diseases and Pathogens of Eucalypts PJ Keane, GA Kile, FD Podger, BN Brown, 2000-10-25 Over the last fifty years there has been an increasing recognition that eucalypts are vulnerable to a wide range of diseases They have suffered destructive epidemics particularly of dieback caused by the cinnamon fungus in native forests of foliar diseases and cankers in plantations and of dieback of remnant trees on agricultural and grazing land This has stimulated intensive research into the causes and management of diseases of the eucalypts This work represents a comprehensive review of our current knowledge of the health and diseases of eucalypts Journal of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada Fisheries Research Board of Canada,1968 Moths of Australia I.
