BALANCING DOING MIND AND BEING MIND

DOING MIND WISE MIND BEING MIND

BALANCING DOING MIND AND BEING MIND

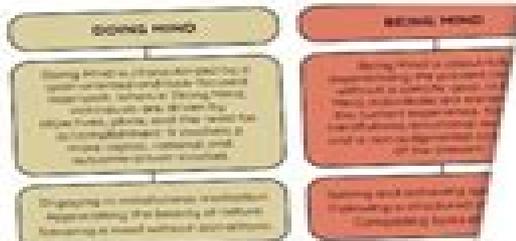

Three scenarios illustrate how someone might experience and approach different situations from the perspectives of Doing Mind, Wise Mind, and Being Mind.

Scenario: Completing a Work Project

Doing Mind	Wise Mind	Being Mind
You are really focused on finishing this.

BALANCING DOING AND BEING MIND

WISE MIND DBT PSYCHOEDUCATIONAL TOOL

Balancing Doing Mind and Being Mind

The key is to find a balance between these two states, recognizing when to be more focused and when to be fully present in the moment. In stressful situations, Doing Mind may be needed for problem-solving, while Being Mind elements allow for emotional regulation and overall well-being.

Approach for Wise Mind

By balancing Doing Mind and Being Mind, individuals can develop a state of mind that combines the structure and focus of Doing Mind with the emotional regulation and self-awareness of Being Mind. This integrated state allows for effective problem-solving, emotional management, and a more balanced approach to life.

Scenario: Spending Time in Nature

Doing Mind	Wise Mind	Being Mind
You have a specific goal, such as getting exercise. The focus is on enhancing the air, enjoying the scenery, and feeling the sun on your face. You are fully present in the moment.	You appreciate the value of both the physical activity and the emotional well-being that nature provides. You know that being in nature contributes to your overall health.	You fully engage your senses in the natural environment. The experience is about being present and allowing the beauty around you.
Your actions are goal-oriented and you may feel fulfilled in the accomplishment of tasks. You might miss the opportunity to fully connect with the beauty of nature.	Balancing this need for exercise with the importance of being present in the moment, you find a way to combine the physical activity with a more mindful approach, focusing on the sensory experience.	You approach nature with a sense of wonder, embracing the opportunity to fully immerse yourself in the moment. The goal is not to complete an activity but to be fully present in the experience.
