Digging Up Dublin:

Digging Up Dublin Nicholas C. Maxwell, 1980 Digging Up Trouble in Dublin Oisín McGann, 2014 Wood Quay Thomas F. Heffernan, 2014-07-03 An urban archaeologist working anywhere in the world can imagine this scenario armed with a small digging tool and a soft brush the archaeologist stands at a freshly cut trench facing off a construction crew driving bulldozers At stake is the past the discovery and preservation of our history Across the gap is the future progress and new buildings for a modern world A battle ensues It happened in Dublin in the early 1960s While investigating and salvage excavating the site for a new municipal office complex archaeologists made one of the most important and exciting discoveries in Ireland's history Buried beneath the present day city of Dublin was the original Viking settlement from the ninth or tenth century in an extraordinary state of preservation houses undecayed wood domestic furniture jewelry toys tools works of art coins plots paths a veritable map of the medieval town Because of its impressive size and state of preservation the site known as Wood Quay was not an ordinary kind of archaeological discovery nor was the battle that followed typical What made Wood Quay unique was that its defender was not the archaeological authority the National Museum of Ireland as is usually the case but rather a spontaneously formed movement of thousands of Dubliners While the museum was ready to turn the site over to the city's developers after routine salvage work had been done a group of prominent literary and political figures seized Wood Quay holding it for almost a month and preventing bulldozers from moving In Realizing the significance of the find the people of Dublin took charge and kept the builders at bay for eight years At the same time they were able to press the museum to return to its archaeological work there Archaeologists ultimately were able to complete good maps of a large portion of the site and recover between one and two million artifacts Today the completed Dublin civic office complex stands on the Wood Quay site fully landscaped and without a trace of the archaeological gold mine that once lay buried below What does remain however is the memory of the powerful impact the citizens of Dublin had in demanding and establishing the connection through Wood Quay to their medieval roots Of interest to archaeologists historic preservationists and city planners alike this fascinating and beautifully written account will also engage the general reader

A New History of Ireland, Volume II Art Cosgrove, 2008-11-06 A New History of Ireland is the largest scholarly project in modern Irish history In 9 volumes it provides a comprehensive new synthesis of modern scholarship on every aspect of Irish history and prehistory from the earliest geological and archaeological evidence through the Middle Ages down to the present day Volume II opens with a character study of medieval Ireland and a panoramic view of the country c 1169 followed by nineteen chapters of narrative history with a survey of Land and People c 1300 There are further chapters on Gaelic and colonial society economy and trade literature in Irish French and English architecture and sculpture manuscripts and illuminations and coinage Training and Practice for Modern Day Archaeologists John H. Jameson, James Eogan, 2012-12-09 In recent years an important and encouraging development in the practice of archaeology and historical preservation has been the markedly increased number of collaborations among archaeologists educators preservation planners and government managers to explore new approaches to archaeological and heritage education and training to accommodate globalization and the realities of the 21st century worldwide But what is the collective experience of archaeologists and cultural heritage specialists in these arenas Should we be encouraged or discouraged by national and international trends In an attempt to answer these questions this volume examines and gives representational examples of the respective approaches and roles of government universities and the private sector in meeting the educational training needs and challenges of practicing archaeologists today
