Brain Function and Malnutrition James W. Prescott, Merrill S. Read, David Baird Coursin, 1975 A Wiley biomedical health publication

Evaluating the Impact of Nutrition and Health Programs Robert E. Klein, 2012-12-06 As is noted in the opening chapter of this volume nutrition and public health programs have been important throughout Latin America and the Caribbean for many years This is due to the special concerns of those responsible for setting national policies the program experience and leadership in public health developed by the national governments and the stimulus and cooperation of the Pan American Health Organization PAHO including its twelve associated centers which focus on research training and program development The need for a coordinated hemisphere wide attack on malnutrition and other health problems was expressed clearly in the Ten Year Health Plan for the Americas 1 This plan established specific targets for reducing the prevalence of the major nutritional diseases and other health problems for the decade 1971 1980 It was noted at that time that very few countries had formulated adequate comprehensive national food and nutrition policies and plans nor had they developed strategies for combating the nutritional deficiencies known to affect large numbers of people throughout the Region Following a review of the available data on a country by country basis in 1975 the PAHO Directing Council endorsed recommendations for formulating the necessary national policies and strategies for the intersectorial execution of food nutrition and health programs 2 This report also summarized the available national data related to nutritional status existing programs such as food fortification and the human resources available for services as well as for research and education
