Harmonizing and reducing trade distorting domestic support: An analysis of the impacts of new domestic support disciplines at the WTO Glauber, Joseph W., Laborde Debucquet, David, Piñeiro, Valeria, 2021-11-30 The upcoming WTO Ministerial in November 2021 will once again provide WTO Members with an opportunity to address and reform agricultural domestic support As pointed out in the Draft Chair Text on Agriculture of 29 July 2021 the Domestic Support pillar has been at the heart of the agricultural negotiations since their commencement in 2000 and to date has proven to be a challenging area to achieve consensus on how best to further reforms in that area This paper examines three broad questions First what would be the effect on agricultural trade if Members were to fully utilize domestic support entitlements under the current Agreement on Agriculture To study the role of existing policy space inherited from the Uruguay Round we examine the impact of full utilization of domestic support entitlements on agricultural markets Under the scenario trade distorting support would increase to USD 1 3 trillion 5 5 times the level under the baseline scenario USD 246 billion Assuming full use of policy space global agricultural production is projected to increase by 6 percent and global prices will drop by 8 percent with all agricultural product prices showing declines While farm income rises a greater share of farm income comes from taxpayer resources and the efficiency of additional transfers ratio between increase in farmer income and taxpayer cost is about 60 percent The second objective of the paper is to discuss and analyze new disciplines that would further the reforms accomplished under the Agreement on Agriculture by harmonizing support levels across Members and providing additional constraints to prevent Members from undermining these disciplines by concentrating support in a few commodities The paper examines how these disciplines would affect production prices trade and farm sector income compared to a business as usual baseline We find that using an overall concept of Overall Trade Distorting Support including all forms of trade distorting measures associated with amber and blue boxes will have very negligible impacts on applied policies by 2030 and small effects on the agricultural markets overall Extending this discipline to measures currently notified under Art 6 2 the development box will not put significant constraints on developing countries Moving to this simplified and more transparent framework will require to define properly an anti concentration clause limiting the amount of payments that can benefit the producers of a specific commodity Such feature will be quite important for sensitive commodities like cotton Lastly the paper examines how the proposed disciplines would affect agricultural markets under the alternative baseline that assumes that Members will utilize full entitlements under the current AoA Depending on the discipline scenarios the potential subsidies increase will be reduced by USD 240 billion to USD 800 billion
