

Person appointed in an advance personal plan
(with health care authority)

Guardian
(with health care authority)

formally appointed

If appointed but not 'willing and able' the hierarchy is not applicable.

Application to NTCAT is required.

If no formal appointments, then the hierarchy applies:

Appropriate relative according to Aboriginal or other customary law or tradition

Spouse or de facto partner

Carer
(not providing commercial care)

Adult child of the person

Parent

Sibling

Friend
(may include extended family)

Public Guardian
(Last resort health care decision maker)

Must have a close and continuing relationship

An appropriate relative can be nominated by family or community as the most appropriate health care decision maker.

A friend or relative who is a carer can still become a health care decision maker if they are receiving a payment from the government for being the person's carer.

A close and continuing relationship means a relative or other close connection with a long-lasting, meaningful relationship considering factors like duration, commitment and financial dependence.
