Deep Simplicity A L:

Emerging Syntheses In Science David Pines,2018-03-05 Evolution of self replicating macromolecules through natural selection is a dynamically ordered process Two concepts are introduced to describe the physical regularity of macromolecular evolution sequence space and quasi species Natural selection means localization of a mutant distribution in sequence space This localized distribution called the quasi species is centered around a master sequence or a degenerate set that the biologist would call the wild type The self ordering of such a system is an essential consequence of its formation through self reproduction of its macromolecular constituents a process that in the dynamical equations expresses itself by positive diagonal coefficients called selective values The theory describes how population numbers of wild type and mutants are related to the distribution of selective values that is to say how value topography maps into population topography For selectively nearly neutral mutants appearing in the quasi species distribution population numbers are greatly enhanced as compared to those of disadvantageous mutants even more so in continuous domains of such selectively valuable mutants As a consequence mutants far distant from the wild type may occur because they are produced with the help of highly populated less distant precursors Since values are cohesively distributed like mountains on earth and since their positions are multiply connected in the high dimensional sequence space the overpopulation of nearly neutral mutants provides guidance for the evolutionary process Localization in sequence space subject to a threshold in the fidelity of reproduction is steadily challenged until an optimal state is reached The model has been designed according to experimentally determined properties of self replicating molecules The conclusions reached from the theoretical models can be used to construct machines that provide optimal conditions for the evolution of functional macromolecules

Cleansing the Cosmos E. Janet Warren,2012-11-08 Understanding evil spiritual forces is essential for Christian theology yet discussion is almost always phrased in terms of spiritual warfare Warfare language is problematic being dualistic assigning a high degree of ontology to evil and poorly applicable to ministry This unique study proposes a biblically based model as the first alternative to a spiritual warfare framework for dealing with the demonic thus providing insights for preaching counseling and missiology Warren develops this model using metaphor theory and examining four biblical themes Creation Cult Christ and Church Metaphors of cleansing ordering and boundary setting are developed in contrast to battle imagery and relevant theological issues are engaged Boyd s warfare imagery Barth s ideas of evil as nothingness and Eliade s notion of the sacred and the profane The role of the Holy Spirit is emphasized and the ontology of evil minimized This model incorporates concentric circles evil being considered peripheral to divine reality and provides a refreshing alternative to current spiritual warfare models
