

EPA should ask the American Bar Association to cooperate in a study of the way health and environmental information and economic analyses should be introduced and considered in judicial proceedings.

ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE

Although it seems clear that the organizational form of the regulatory agency will affect the way it carries out its regulatory responsibilities, there is little agreement about the kinds of effect that particular forms of organization have. Some members of the committee thought that a multimember independent commission to regulate chemicals would be more responsive to all interest groups and would also be able to make better use of technical information. Other committee members thought that such a structure would dilute responsibility and responsiveness and favored the current arrangement of a single administrator serving at the pleasure of the President.

Within the Committee there were divergent opinions on the optimum organizational structure for making chemical regulatory decisions. It is recommended that Congress give consideration to alternative decision-making structures. In particular, it should consider whether responsibility should be vested in a board or commission with fixed terms in office or in a single administrator.
