Asking About Cells:

Asking about Cells Allan J. Tobin, Richard E. Morel, 1996-01-01 The main goal of ASKING ABOUT CELLS is to evoke from students a desire to learn more about cell biology which stems from gaining an understanding of the processes by which researchers discover the connections between cells and the rest of biology By breaking down the typically encyclopedic walls of molecular and cellular detail this text concentrates on presenting material through the energy of inquiry revealing to students the questioning nature of cell biology This exciting new cell biology text is designed for a one semester introductory course for instructors who wish to emphasize basic concepts and principles This text portrays and emphasizes how the ongoing process of scientific inquiry has led to our knowledge of how cells operate In this new text cell biology is portrayed as a dynamic blend of curiosity and observation that has led to new questions and to a continuing quest to understand fundamental life processes

Regeneration Code Team Trex, 2026-02-02 If you cut a planarian worm in half you get two worms If a salamander loses a limb it grows a perfect replacement Yet when humans suffer similar injuries we are left with nothing but scars This book tackles one of biology's most tantalizing mysteries why did mammals lose the superpower of regeneration Written for the inquisitive mind it bridges the gap between the pond and the hospital explaining the fundamental rules that dictate life death and repair You will journey into the cellular machinery of the superstars of regrowth discovering how they turn back biological time to summon new tissue from old From the invisible chemical maps that guide a growing finger to the electric conversations between nerves and skin the text reveals the precise blueprints of reconstruction It also confronts the Faustian Bargain of human biology exploring the controversial theory that our inability to regenerate is the evolutionary price we pay to suppress cancer Part of The Library of Unconventional Ideas this volume avoids vague metaphors in favor of measurable science and developmental constraints It offers a clear sophisticated look at the Regeneration Code written in our DNA exploring a set of genetic instructions that is currently dormant but perhaps not deleted The Parliamentary Debates (official Report). Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons, 1914 Engineering, 1908 Gleanings in Bee Culture, 1881 Transactions of the Faraday Society Faraday Society, 1911 Tractor and Gas Engine Review, 1913 The Third Lens Andrew S. Reynolds, 2018-06-21 Does science aim at providing an account of the world that is literally true or objectively true Understanding the difference requires paying close attention to metaphor and its role in science In The Third Lens Andrew S Reynolds argues that metaphors like microscopes and other instruments are a vital tool in the construction of scientific knowledge and explanations of how the world works More than just rhetorical devices for conveying difficult ideas metaphors provide the conceptual means with which scientists interpret and intervene in the world Reynolds here investigates the role of metaphors in the creation of scientific concepts theories and explanations using cell theory as his primary case study He explores the history of key metaphors that have informed the field and the experimental philosophical and social circumstances under which they have emerged risen in popularity and in some cases faded from view How we think of cells as chambers organisms or even machines makes a difference to scientific practice Consequently an accurate picture of how scientific knowledge is made requires us to understand how the metaphors scientists use and the social values that often surreptitiously accompany them influence our understanding of the world and ultimately of ourselves The influence of metaphor isn't limited to how we think about cells or proteins in some cases they can even lead to real material change in the very nature of the thing in question as scientists use technology to alter the reality to fit the metaphor Drawing out the implications of science's reliance upon metaphor The Third Lens will be of interest to anyone working in the areas of history and philosophy of science science studies cell and molecular biology science education and communication and metaphor in general
