Metropolis - Urban Structure

The Metropolis project is a comprehensive urban development plan for a city of 100,000 inhabitants. The plan focuses on creating a sustainable and livable urban environment. Key features include a mix of residential, commercial, and public spaces, as well as a robust infrastructure system. The project is designed to be a model for future urban development.

The project is a multi-phase development. The first phase focuses on the core urban structure, including the central business district and the main transportation corridors. The second phase involves the development of surrounding residential and commercial areas. The final phase focuses on the integration of green spaces and public infrastructure.
