Teaching and Learning Chinese in Global Contexts Linda Tsung, Ken Cruickshank, 2011-01-13      A Key to Chinese Speech and Writing Joël Bellassen, Pengpeng Zhang,      Escaping the End of Times Brigid E. Vance, 2025-11-01

Escaping the End of Times is a book where history meets psychology. It invites readers to explore the intricate relationships between dreams, politics, and the Chinese writing system in early modern China. Thoroughly researched and written in an accessible manner, this book presents a series of historical encounters that reveal how Ming scholars countered instability by compiling and editing dream texts. Readers learn how these scholars translated their dreams into action, used the past to bolster their status, reaffirmed their preferred societal order, merged myth and history, and interpreted their dreams and the dreams of others through creative techniques grounded in scholarly tradition. By combining detailed research with captivating storytelling, this book not only brings the world of late Ming dream analysis to life but also demonstrates the relevance of the past to the stories we tell now about ourselves and our own dreams. This is a fresh look at a chapter in the history of dream interpretation that has been little discussed in English language sources. Vance brings her own grace at expression to uncover the code of unconscious cultural creativity that Ming intellectuals found in their dreams.

John Beebe, Jungian analyst, author of Integrity in Depth. In this captivating and methodologically innovative book, Vance immerses readers in the dream world of the Ming. Bringing historical insight to bear on personal experience, she inspires readers to reflect on the enduring power of dreams and memory to shape social identity and self-expression.

Rivi Handler Spitz, sinologist, Macalester College. An exquisitely told tale of another time with deep resonance for our own. Marginalized and disempowered in the social and political chaos of late Ming China, educated literati turned to dreams for meaning, understanding, and escape in the end of times.

Jerald Podair, historian, Lawrence University. It is a truly unique history book yet so much more than that. It draws you in with an engaging analysis of how people sought certainty in flux and found control through creative play. Vance writes as if she and the reader inhabit the same world as the Ming people, imbuing the book with irresistible charm.

Zuo Ya, historian, University of California Santa Barbara.      Reform of Chinese Journalism Education Driven by Media Convergence Wen Cai, 2024-11-25. This book explores the significant changes in Chinese journalism education in response to the rapid development of digital and new media technologies. It emphasizes the need for journalism education reform to keep pace with changing times and cultivate talents with an international outlook, innovative capabilities, and professional skills. It begins by exploring the concept of media convergence and its historical development, as well as the challenges and opportunities it presents for journalism and communication education. In particular, it explains how media convergence affects the demand for journalistic talent and changes the concept of journalism education in China. The author then presents practical examples of journalism education reform in China, including innovations in talent development models, curriculum reforms, and textbook improvements. A case study of reform practices in a top journalism school in China adds depth to the discussion of educational reform and core curriculum development The author also discusses unresolved issues in journalism education reform such as the scale of education the positioning of talent cultivation and the construction of faculty teams and proposes solutions The book will appeal to scholars and students of journalism education journalism and new media Chinese journalism and Chinese studies
