A Look At 2005 From The Right Side:

A Look at 2005 from the Right Side, 2006-01-01 Why a look at 2005 in cartoon form Why not The year was full of great and terrible things but cartoons still have that ability to capture the spirit of an event in a way that other media cannot Photos capture a moment the printed word captures the thought but in a cartoon I can take the image and the thought and put them in a vise coat them with industrial adhesive give the guys big noses and dopey expressions and produce a hopefully funny and ungodly mess And since 2005 was a remarkable mess it was an unending source of inspiration for cartoons From the Introduction Paul Nowak whose editorial cartoons can be seen on CNSNews com and other media outlets reviews the year 2005 from a conservative perspective

Lateralization and cognitive systems Sebastian Ocklenburg, Christian Beste, Onur Gunturkun, Marco Hirnstein, 2015-02-24 Left right asymmetries of structure and function are a common organization principle in the brains of humans and non human vertebrates alike While there are inherently asymmetric systems such as the human language system or the song system of songbirds the impact of structural or functional asymmetries on perception cognition and behavior is not necessarily limited to these systems For example performance in experimental paradigms that assess executive functions such as inhibition planning or action monitoring is influenced by information processing in the bottom up channel Depending on the type of stimuli used one hemisphere can be more efficient in processing than the other and these functional cerebral asymmetries have been shown to modulate the efficacy of executive functions via the bottom up channel We only begin to understand the complex neuronal mechanisms underlying this interaction between hemispheric asymmetries and cognitive systems Therefore it is the aim of this Research Topics to further elucidate how structural or functional hemispheric asymmetries modulate perception cognition and behavior in the broadest sense

Perspective Taking: building a neurocognitive framework for integrating the "social" and the "spatial" Klaus Kessler, Sarah H Creem-Regehr, Antonia Hamilton, 2015-06-08 Background Interacting with other people involves spatial awareness of one's own body and the other's body and viewpoint In the past social cognition has focused largely on belief reasoning which is abstracted away from spatial and bodily representations while there is a strong tradition of work on spatial and object representation which does not consider social interactions These two domains have flourished independently A small but growing body of research examines how awareness of space and body relates to the ability to interpret and interact with others This also builds on the growing awareness that many cognitive processes are embodied which could be of relevance for the integration of the social and spatial domains Online mental transformations of spatial representations have been shown to rely on simulated body movements and various aspects of social interaction have been related to the simulation of a conspecific's behaviour within the observer's bodily repertoire Both dimensions of embodied transformations or mappings seem to serve the purpose of establishing alignment between the observer and a target In spatial cognition research the target is spatially defined as a particular viewpoint or frame of reference FOR yet in social interaction research another viewpoint is occupied by another's mind which crucially requires perspective taking in the sense of considering what another person experiences from a different viewpoint Perspective taking has been studied in different ways within developmental psychology cognitive psychology psycholinguistics neuropsychology and cognitive neuroscience over the last few decades yet integrative approaches for channelling all information into a unified account of perspective taking and viewpoint transformations have not been presented so far Aims This Research Topic aims to bring together the social and the spatial and to highlight findings and methods which can unify research across areas In particular the topic aims to advance our current theories and set the stage for future developments of the field by clarifying and linking theoretical concepts across disciplines Scope The focus of this Research Topic is on the SPATIAL and the SOCIAL and we anticipate that all submissions will touch on both aspects and will explicitly attempt to bridge conceptual gaps Social questions could include questions of how people judge another person's viewpoint or spatial capacities or how they imagine themselves from different points of view Spatial questions could include consideration of different physical configurations of the body and the arrangement of different viewpoints including mental rotation of objects or viewpoints that have social relevance Questions could also relate to how individual differences in personality sex development culture species etc influence or determine social and spatial perspective judgements Many different methods can be used to explore perspective taking including mental chronometry behavioural tasks EEG MEG and fMRI child development neuropsychological patients virtual reality and more Bringing together results and approaches from these different domains is a key aim of this Research Topic We welcome submissions of experimental papers reviews and theory papers which cover these topics

Chimpanzee
Kevin D. Hunt, 2020-08-20 The chimpanzee is one of our planet's best loved and most instantly recognisable animals Splitting from the human lineage between four and six million years ago it is along with its cousin the bonobo our closest living relative sharing around 94% of our DNA First encountered by Westerners in the seventeenth century virtually nothing was known about chimpanzees in their natural environment until 1960 when Jane Goodall travelled to Gombe to live and work with them Accessibly written yet fully referenced and uncompromising in its accuracy and comprehensiveness this book encapsulates everything we currently know about chimpanzees from their discovery and why we study them to their anatomy physiology genetics and culture The text is beautifully illustrated and infused with examples and anecdotes drawn from the author's thirty years of primate observation making this a perfect resource for students of biological anthropology and primatology as well as non specialists interested in chimpanzees

Truth, 1888 Andrea Robbins and Max Becher Maurice Berger, 2008 This exhibition and catalog present the first examination of the portrait photographs of Andrea

Robbins and Max Becher The artists portraits like their radical landscapes and city scenes are powerfully evocative boldly subverting our expectations of the discipline of portraiture Rather than capturing the visual essence of a sitter they reveal identity to be multifarious transitive and culturally and historically bound Robbins and Becher capture their subjects in ways that transform enhance and accentuate social and cultural meaning They do so with the full complicity and respect of the people they photograph They spend weeks living with each community they document They immerse themselves in the stories of its citizens and history They interview its residents and participate in their rituals and customs They photograph them in various active stages of work play and home life Most important they allow their subjects to represent themselves not only as they would like to be seen but also in ways that illuminate the complexity of their humanity By seeing identity as volatile mutable and contingent these improbable portraits remind us that who we are is as much a matter of choice as destiny
