To be a senator
you must be at least 30 years old, a U.S. citizen for at least 14 years, and a resident of the state you represent.

To be a representative
you must be at least 25 years old, a U.S. citizen for at least seven years and a resident of the state you represent.

Senators are elected to a term of six years and can be re-elected to a second term.

Representatives serve two-year terms and can be re-elected to a second term.

Who's in charge of the Senate?

There are two people in charge of the Senate. The first is the vice president, who is called the president of the Senate. The second is the president pro tempore, who takes over when the vice president is absent.

All the new representatives in the House are for Senate majority leader and the Senate minority leader. They decide who will be in the committee and which bills will be considered.

2 who only the House can do

- declare a state of emergency
- impeach a president
- impeach a federal judge
- impeach a Supreme Court justice

There are 100 senators, who serve six years in Congress. Unlike the president, there is no limit to the number of times a senator can be re-elected.

Senators
are elected by the states. Each state has two senators, who serve six-year terms. The Senate is the upper house of Congress. It is called the "upper house" because it is the higher of the two houses. The Senate is the only body that can ratify treaties and confirm or reject presidential appointments.

Representatives are elected by the people. Each state has a certain number of representatives, based on its population. The House is the lower house of Congress. It is called the "lower house" because it is the lower of the two houses. The House is the only body that can impeach a president or a federal judge.

There are 435 representatives in the House of Representatives.

The number of representatives for each state is based on the number of people living there. The term of office is only two years, but representatives can run for re-election as many times as they like.

2 who only the House can do

- declare a state of emergency
- impeach a president
- impeach a federal judge
- impeach a Supreme Court justice

Who's in charge of the House?

The speaker of the House is in charge of the House. The speaker chooses members of the House committee that will discuss bills proposed in the House. The speaker also decides which bills will be considered. The speaker is elected by the House members and serves a two-year term.

Representatives serve two-year terms and can be re-elected to a second term. They are elected by the people in their respective states.

Can the president veto a bill passed by Congress?
Yes, the president can veto a bill passed by Congress. However, Congress can override a veto with a two-thirds majority in both the House and the Senate.

Can the House impeach a president?
Yes, the House can impeach a president. The Senate then decides whether to remove the president from office.

How many representatives are there in the House?
There are 435 representatives in the House of Representatives.

What is the difference between the House and the Senate?
The House has 435 members, while the Senate has 100 members. The House has two-year terms, while the Senate has six-year terms. The House is the only body that can impeach a president or a federal judge.
