American Multinationals And American Interests:

American Multinationals and American Interests C. Fred Bergsten, Thomas Horst, Theodore H. Moran, 1978 Monograph of economic analysis and economic models illustrating the effects of multinational enterprise on the domestic economy and foreign policy of the USA examines the impact of direct foreign investments on taxation competition employment access to foreign raw materials etc and seeks to provide a foundation for sound government policies References and statistical tables

American Multinationals and American Economic Interests Theodore H. Moran, 2009 This working paper shows that multinational corporations do not locate their operations in a zero sum manner that favors host economies at the expense of the home economy The two way flow of inward and outward investment does not create an outcome that can be reasonably characterized in any way as hollowing out the home economy The evidence consistently shows that the expansion of MNC operations abroad and the strengthening of MNC operations in the home country are complementary and the answer to the counterfactual would the home country be better off or would workers in the home country be better off if home country MNCs were prevented from engaging in outward investment is indisputably negative Abstract

Companies Engaged in Foreign Trade United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on the Judiciary, 1919 Interest Allocation Rules, Financing Patterns, and the Operations of U.S. Multinationals Kenneth Froot, James R. Hines, 1994

This paper examines the impact of the 1986 change in U S interest allocation rules on the investment and financing decisions of American multinationals The 1986 change reduced the tax deductibility of the interest expenses of firms with excess foreign tax credits The resulting increase in the cost of debt gives firms incentives to substitute away from using debt finance

Furthermore to the extent that perfect financing substitutes are not available the overall cost of capital rises as well The empirical tests indicate that the loss of tax deductibility of parent company interest expenses appears to reduce significantly borrowing and investing by firms with excess foreign tax credits The same firms tend to undertake new lease commitments which may reflect the use of leases as alternatives to capital ownership In addition firms affected by the tax change tend to scale back the scope of their foreign and total operations These results are consistent with the hypothesis that firms substitute away from debt when debt becomes more expensive and also with the hypothesis that the loss of interest tax shields increases a firm s cost of capital
