

Do's and don'ts

of behavior management

Do's :

Do treat your student the same way you'd like someone to treat your child.

Consider reward systems first as a consequence for behavior.

Be proactive about managing behavior. Proactive strategies are more sustainable than reactive strategies. It's what you do BEFORE that makes the greatest difference.

Immediately deliver consequences following a behavior and move on.

Deliver consistent behavior-specific praise for behaviors you want to see MORE of. Catch them being good!

Use less language with a child who is in distress. Less is more.

Don'ts :

Don't speak negatively about a child, especially in front of them.

Don't immediately jump to punitive measures when presented with challenging behaviors. Long term consequences of punitive measures include increased instances of retaliation and potential damage to the relationship.

Don't give a demand unless you are 100% committed to following through with it.

Don't draw more attention to negative behaviors than there needs to be.

Don't remind the child of their own negative behaviors that occurred earlier, whether it's been several minutes, several days, or several weeks.
