Beyond Fur Trade David J. Keene,2002 This study challenges the assumption that a fur trade economy structured the colonial empire created by the French in the eighteenth century Artifact assemblages from Forts de Chartres Ouatenton and Michilimackinac are compared Fort construction techniques are discussed in reference to the colonial economy and social structure In addition settlement pattern data from these three forts and from the Fortress of Louisbourg and the settlement of Port Royal in Nova Scotia are compared Finally a new model is proposed to explain the variation observed between these settlements In this new model frontier outposts and settlement are seen as part of a system of entrepots These entrepots are at the center of local economies that can be characterized as either economies of extraction or economies of production Fur trade cod fishing and mining are examples of economies of extraction whereas farming and animal husbandry are considered economies of production The local economic system is reflected in three areas the artifact assemblage the architecture of the fort at the center of the entrepot system and the regional pattern of settlement Fort de Chartres in the Illinois Country is a classic example of an entrepot in a local economy of production Forts Michilimackinac and Ouatenton are examples of entrepots in local economies of extraction Archaeological data and documentary information supports this conclusion The Max Brand Companion Jon Tuska,Vicki Piekarski,1996 Or that Faust thought of himself as a poet writing prose as he put it to pay the bills Or that to pay the bills he constantly strove to surpass his record of some 20 000 publishable words a day and that he sold 99 percent of the fiction he wrote The Max Brand Companion serves to tell the reader about the man as well as the author charts the history of Faust s work and its derivations and presents works by Faust himself indicative of the scope and range of his imagination The Publishers' Trade List Annual ,1983 Dulcarnon Henry Milner Rideout,1926
