Careers In Theory And Experience A Twenty Year Longitudinal Study:

Careers in Theory and Experience Warren D. Gribbons, Paul R. Lohnes, 1983-06-30 This book tells what happens in terms of career development during the 20 years following the 8th grade. The first 20 year longitudinal study of career development in America in the post World War II period to have reached publication stage it is also the only such study that includes women in its sample. The research was designed to test the best theoretical formulations available. Its findings provide clear and convincing tests of existing developmental theory, support useful extensions of theory, and stimulate hypotheses for future research. Two important aspects of the research program are the production of a new measurement technique for scaling vocational maturity in adolescents and refinement of an innovative statistical methodology for career development modeling. The new measurement device entitled Readiness for Career Planning is applicable to both counseling guidance programs and research programs. The statistical strategy combining multiple discriminant analysis and Markov chain analysis in a coherent modeling procedure is a major innovation in data analysis procedures for research on careers. Beyond these technical contributions, the book is highly readable on a non technical level. It provides provocative and helpful insights into the experience of developing careers in America to readers in many walks of life. Appended to this study is a NEW READINESS FOR CAREER PLANNING RCP INSTRUMENT AND MANUAL for use by the school counselor and educational psychologist.

Vocational Psychological and Organisational Perspectives on Career, 2009-01-01 It has long been lamented that although several disciplines contribute to career scholarship they work in isolation from one another thus denying career theory, research, and practice the benefits that multidisciplinary collaboration would bring This constitutes a lost opportunity at a time when new understandings and approaches are needed in order to respond effectively to global changes in society and work This book takes a major step towards remedying this situation by bringing together two key perspectives on career the vocational psychological and the organisational interpreted broadly to include organisation behaviour and human resource management Written by international experts the book opens by identifying some of the tributaries that flow into the great delta of careers scholarship and noting the need to link what are at present separate islands of scholarship It is structured to allow comparison between the ways in which the two perspectives address career development and career management theory research and interventions It concludes by pointing to the possibilities for dialogue and even collaboration between these perspectives and suggesting ways in which these could be brought about The book will be essential reading for career scholars because with its potential to stimulate new thinking and developments in theory and research and also importantly in practice with beneficial spin offs for policy makers this dialogue could open a new phase in career scholarship With its overviews of the history theory research and practice of both perspectives the book will also be a valuable resource for students of both perspectives
