puppies that you ought to know

- 1 Puppies are born after a 63 day gestation cycle which means the mom is only pregnant for 63 days
- 2 Puppies are born almost helpless but they have several natural instincts the moment they are born
- 3 Puppies instinctually are able to nurse right after birth and will spend a large portion of their time feeding and sleeping
- 4 The first couple weeks puppies will be unable to open up their eyes
- 5 In the first few months of their life they will grow very rapidly developing both physically and socially
- 6 Despite an independent nature they learn quite a bit from their littermates soon after they are born
- 7 Puppies require quite a bit of socialization meaning you will have to spend a great deal of time with them in order to familiarize them with their surroundings
- 8 Every puppy needs to be taken to the veterinarian within two months of their birth not only for a check up but to get the initial shots that they will need
- 9 Puppies need to be dewormed at an early age and they should also be checked for potentially deadly conditions such as Parvo
- 10 At some point puppies will have to be potty trained something that should start about two months after they are born

Although there are many more facts about puppies that you can learn the best thing you can do is learn from experience and also apply all of the techniques that you learn from books the Internet and people that have successfully trained puppies before Having a puppy is a wonderful experience but it takes hard work and dedication to allow them to become healthy adult dogs that you will love for many years to come
