According to the interviewees, creative music making improved learning skills, joy of learning, and skills of thought. It also strengthened the active role and creative self-expression of the pupil. Interviewees also highlighted the transfer effect of the creative music making. It was also experienced as meaningful for grouping and developing social atmosphere. However, all the interviewees experienced their qualification for teaching creative music making at least partially insufficient. Qualifications were more often originated from hobbies and from prior work experience.

Creativity Sing Lau, Anna H. H. Hui, Grace Y. C. Ng, 2004. What actually is creativity? And what contributes to its conceptualization and development? For decades, these and other questions have fascinated researchers, educators, parents, and laypeople alike, and equally so in the East and West. This interesting collection of articles is an attempt at exploring and answering the above questions from both the Eastern and Western perspectives. Readers may find some answers stimulating and others bewildering. This is in fact the reality and fascination of Computer Based Creative Music Making.
