Creativity and Affect Melvin P. Shaw, Mark A. Runco, 1994 The authors of this volume attempt to cohere the field of creativity and affect in a scholarly fashion by categorizing and characterizing some of its major features including environmental influences underlying processes specific affective states the role of atypical or pathological personalities unconscious processes physiological components proactive and reactive stimuli intrinsic motivation eminence versus everyday creativity and testing of assessing the affective component of creativity The authors also examine and discuss the role that emotions feelings and moods play in the creative process This volume also provides a vehicle for students and psychotherapists with which they can fully appreciate the feelings generated by the creative process and the various stages of it How does a creator feel during its more mundane phases Can he or she tolerate the frustration of failing and being unsuccessful most of the time What is the real joy of achievement success and ultimate acceptance by one's peers in a given field Do we have to exhibit major psychopathological features in order to achieve eminence in specific fields What is the role of mind altering substances mood disorders and the like This volume answers these questions and more

Affect and Creativity Sandra Walker Russ, 2013-02-01 Much work has been done on cognitive processes and creativity but there is another half to the picture of creativity the affect half This book addresses that other half by synthesizing the information that exists about affect and creativity and presenting a new model of the role of affect in the creative process Current information comes from disparate literatures research traditions and theoretical approaches There is a need in the field for a comprehensive framework for understanding and investigating the role of affect in creativity The model presented here spells out connections between specific affective and cognitive processes important in creativity and personality traits associated with creativity Identifying common findings and themes in a variety of research studies and descriptions of the creative process this book integrates child and adult research and the classic psychoanalytic approach to creativity with contemporary social and cognitive psychology In so doing it addresses two major questions Is affect an important part of the creative process If it is then how is affect involved in creative thinking In addition Russ presents her own research program in the area of affect and creativity and introduces The Affect in Play Scale a method of measuring affective expression in children's play which can be useful in child psychotherapy and creativity research Current issues in the creativity area are also discussed such as artistic versus scientific creativity adjustment and the creative process the role of computers in learning about creativity gender differences in the creative process and enhancing creativity in home school and work settings Finally Russ points to future research issues and directions and discusses alternative research paradigms such as mood induction methods versus children's play procedures

Affect in Artistic Creativity Jussi Saarinen, 2020-07-30 Why do painters paint Obviously there are numerous possible reasons They paint to create images for others enjoyment to solve visual problems to convey ideas and to contribute to a rich artistic tradition This book argues that there is yet another crucially important but often overlooked reason Painters paint to feel They paint because it enables them to experience special feelings such as being absorbed in creative play and connected to something vitally significant Painting may even transform the painter s whole sense of being Thus painting is not only about producing art communicating content and so on but also about setting up and inhabiting an experiential space wherein highly valued feelings are interactively enabled and supported This book investigates how and why this happens by combining psychoanalytical theorization on creativity with philosophical thinking on affectivity It focuses on creative experience itself and illuminates the psychological mechanisms and dynamics that underlie the affects at stake Painters own descriptions of how they feel at work are used throughout to give an accurate true to life portrayal of the experience of painting The strength of the book lies in its open minded yet critical integration of contemporary psychoanalytic and philosophical thinking and in its truthfulness to painters experiential descriptions of the painterly process On the whole it enriches our understanding of artistic creativity and sheds more light on how and why we come to feel the things we do As such the book will appeal to philosophers psychoanalysts and art researchers alike

The Influence of Affects on Creativity Tanja Jovanovic, 2017 Research and practice have proved the importance of creativity in innovation management Thereby individual creativity can be influenced by many determinants Affective states seem to be a decisive aspect in this context influencing individual behaviour and thinking The aim of the present paper is therefore to investigate the influence of affective states on creativity For this purpose a systematic literature review was conducted to explore the current state of research in this field We identified 16 articles in peer reviewed academic journals that were published from 2005 2015 Objects of interest of this review are positive and negative affective states that comprise moods as well as emotions We examine the underlying theories methodology study design and research findings of the relevant articles Moreover we identify inconsistent findings and still existing research gaps Our review shows that research found an influence of both negative and positive affective states on individual creativity While the influence of positive affective states on creativity is still the most prominent aspect in this field of research theories incorporating interaction effects have raised attraction However studies regarding the influence of negative affect on creativity are underrepresented and ambiguous Lastly this systematic literature review provides a useful synopsis to distribute research efforts appropriately within the next decade

mood influence employee creativity We address this question through a daily longitudinal field study of 222 employees in 7 companies in 3 industries Although research on this question has previously been confined primarily to the psychological laboratory this study uses daily real time measures to track the relationship between the mood and creativity of employees as they work on creative projects We find that positive mood predicts employee creative thinking self rated creativity and peer rated creativity Moreover lagged analyses suggest that positive mood leads to creativity there was only weak evidence that creativity leads to positive mood Although enduring positive dispositional affect independently predicts peer rated creativity the basic mood creativity relationship holds even controlling for dispositional affect These results have implications for theories of affective processes in organizational creativity and cognition and practical ramifications for the management of creativity

The Role of Affect in Creative Projects and Exploratory Search Paul S. Adler, 2010 The theory of creativity and exploratory search developed by Simon March and their followers in the Carnegie school relies on a coolly cognitive account of motivation We argue that a more robust theory would give affect greater prominence Our approach is inspired by Dewey s Human Nature and Conduct Prometheus Amherst MA analysis of the three components of human conduct habit intelligence and impulse where impulse is Dewey s term for affect The Carnegie approach incorporates the first two but has little to say about the third We review literature on affect in psychology psychodynamics and neurobiology showing how it allows us to characterize more effectively the motivational underpinnings of individual creativity and collective creative projects This in turn enables us to sketch the key role of affect in exploratory search as compared to other domains of organizational activity
