Crime Immigrant Youth:

Crime and Immigrant Youth Tony Waters, 1999-03-31 This interesting and accessible volume examines several immigrant populations and explores why waves of youthful crime emerge in some of those populations but not in others. Author Tony Waters uses data from 100 years of United States immigration records, particularly in California, to examine immigrant groups such as Laotians, Koreans, and Mexicans in the late 20th century, as well as Mexicans and Molokan Russians in the early 20th century. Crime and Immigrant Youth is a unique study of migration as a process that sometimes leads to youthful crime beyond the norms of either the home or host culture. Water concludes that when an immigrant group has a large population of young males and not all immigrant groups do, it creates the potential for patterned misunderstandings between immigrant parents and their children. This situation in turn provides conditions for a predictable outbreak of crime within deviant subcultures, i.e., gangs, as shown in numerous case examples. Waters also explains how youthful immigrant crime often erupts because of the structural relationships between immigrant groups and the host community rather than the cultural differences imported from abroad.

Crimes of Passage Anthony Edward Waters, 1995

Gangs and Immigrant Youth Kyung-Seok Choo, 2007 Choo explores group delinquency in the Asian American community. His primary focus is two youth groups: a Korean-affiliated Chinese youth gang and a Korean delinquent group. The two groups have evolved through different processes and under different community circumstances. Both manifest differing patterns of delinquent activities and require different approaches to their problems. By analyzing the demographic, socioeconomic, and cultural characteristics of the Korean immigrant community, the book discusses the unique lifestyle of Korean American immigrants in relation to their youth and group delinquency problem. Choo also explains the phenomenon of gangs and immigrant youth by detailed comparison of the emergence, development, persistence, and change of these two distinctive groups.

Examining the Relationship Between Exposure to Violence and Delinquent Behaviors Across Different Immigrant Generations Meng Ru Shih, 2019 Contrary to popular rhetoric, several immigration studies have shown that the relationship between immigration and crime is null or negative. Within this strand of research, first-generation immigrants exhibit significantly lower crime rates than their comparisons. However, recent studies have also found that crime rates began to rise in second and second-plus generation immigrants. The mechanism contributing to changes in crime rates across generations remains largely unknown. This study posits that exposure to violence (ETV) is one potential risk factor related to the increase in crime and delinquency among immigrant youth, particularly in second-generation immigrant youth. The current study used data from the Pathways to Desistance Study to examine this relationship. Two types of ETV are examined: direct ETV and witness ETV. At baseline, first-generation youth had lower direct and indirect ETV than their peers, whereas second-generation youth reported the highest direct ETV. The associations between ETVs and deviant outcomes are positive, and neighborhood conditions mediate this relationship. Moreover, ethnic identity could be a protective factor for immigrant youth. Collectively, the results support that ETVs are the risk factors contributing to delinquency among immigrant youth Future research directions and policy implications are addressed Delinquency and Youth Crime Gary F. Jensen, Dean G. Rojek, 1992 Immigrant Youth and Crime, 2009 The ease with which immigrant youth and their families integrate into Canadian society has a strong impact on their futures those who become marginalised during this process risk becoming alienated and in some cases may become involved with the criminal justice system Interviews were conducted with 12 stakeholders who frequently come into contact with immigrant and refugee youth involved in criminal and or gang activity Based on the family individual peer school and community risk and protective factors reported to have an influence on immigrant and refugee youth recommendations are made for bridging gaps in programming and policy initiatives to support at risk youth This article reports on the risk and protective factors that are perceived by key stakeholders to influence immigrant youths who eventually become involved in crime gangs and violence in Edmonton Canada Youth Authority Quarterly, 1977 Crime and the Criminal Philip Archibald Parsons, 1926 California Youth Authority Quarterly, 1979 Organized Crime Nikos Passas, 1995 This work on organized crime encompasses methodological problems in the study of organized crime itself crime as a way of life in America a family case study arson and urban economy corruption in agencies of social control Canadian reflections on the Finsbury Park experience and drugs A Guide to Material on Crime and Criminal Justice Augustus Frederick Kuhlman, Social Science Research Council (U.S.).
