The Social Contexts of Criminal Sentencing Martha A. Myers, Susette M.

Talarico, 2012-12-06 Historically the announcement and invocation of criminal penalties were public spectacles Today fear of crime and disaffection with the criminal justice system guarantee that this public fascination with punishment continues In the past decade virtually every legislature in the country has undertaken sentencing reform in the hope that public concern with crime would be allayed and disparities in criminal sentences would be reduced if not eliminated Scholars have intensified their longstanding preoccupation with discrimination and the sources of disparate treatment during sentencing issues that continue to fuel contemporary reform efforts As documented in Chapter 1 empirical research on sentencing has concentrated much of its attention on the offender Only recently have attempts been made to imbed sentencing in its broader organizational and social contexts Our study extends these attempts by quantitatively analyzing the relationship between the offender and the social contexts in which he or she is sentenced We use data on felony sentencing in Georgia between 1976 and 1985 to ask three questions The first addresses an issue of perennial concern during sentencing how important are offender attributes both those of explicit legal relevance and traits whose legal relevance is questionable or nonexistent The second question directs attention to the social contexts of sentencing and asks whether they directly affect sentencing outcomes
