Irish Writers in the Civil Service Jonathan Foster, Elliott Mills, 2026-01-05 Tracing the evolution of the figure of the writer cum bureaucrat from the Victorian Irish Civil Service through to the present day this volume examines the scenes of literary art that developed behind counters and desks in bureaucratic Dublin and Belfast as well as the international contexts in which Irish writers found administrative work in the diplomatic sphere Advancing our sense of the shape and dynamics of these environments the volume maps out literary networks spanning both local and central government institutions thus shedding new light on the phenomenon of the literariness of Irish officialdom The volume shows that Irish writers in bureaucratic institutions drew extensively upon their work life experiences in their writing frequently emulating or critiquing bureaucratic writing practices in their literary work Whilst exploring the ways in which employment in state bureaucracies facilitated literary writing the volume also articulates the specific challenges facing Irish writer officials whose freedom of expression was drastically curtailed by their position as state functionaries Examining this complex literary scene of the state functionary across time presents a new window into the workings of the Irish state as processed through the creative imagination of those who knew it best Philip Larkin Stephen Regan, 1992 Following the recent publication of Philip Larkin's Collected Poems this study draws on a previously unavailable range of work extending from 1938 to 1983 In the course of its survey the book exposes the limitations of narrowly thematic and formalist criticism but it treats with equal scepticism the fashionable tendency to regard Larkin as a symbolist poet In his appraisal Stephen Regan argues strongly for the importance of reading the poems historically and contextually The emphasis here is on the post-war cultural milieu of Larkin's work and its complex engagement with questions of individual freedom and social commitment
