

SCHOOL LIBRARY COLLECTION DEVELOPMENT FRAMEWORK

Collection development for any type of library is an ongoing process of improvement. School libraries led by certified professionals collect and curate resources used to meet the learning and teaching needs of their school community. Resources include, but are not limited to, print and digital formats as well as devices, artifacts, and tools. These resources guide and support the mission of the South Dakota Department of Education.

Although each school, district, and system is unique and must reflect the mission and goals of the local community, school library improvement operates most efficiently with a plan, policies that further that plan, and procedures that implement those policies. This framework is an outline of best practices for districts to use and adapt to their local needs. It is intended as a guide to be built upon and revised as required by the changing needs of the future-ready school community it serves. The components of this framework include three distinct documents/templates designed to provide direction for the library in all areas of operation. Combination school/public libraries also require a Joint-Use Agreement.

The following information shares definitions for the key features of the plan, policies, and procedures. Each definition is followed with an essential question. These questions are not all inclusive. As the school library considers their needs other questions may arise.

Acquisitions and Collection Development in the Humanities Linda S Katz, Sally J Kenney, Helen Kinsella, 2013-10-31

Acquisitions and Collection Development in the Humanities is a one of a kind guide on the procedures, approaches, and principles needed to make sound decisions in acquiring materials in various areas of the humanities. It gives you an inside look at managerial concerns in documentary delivery, changing budgetary needs, and fluctuations in journal prices and helps you address many of the important questions in acquisitions and collection development within both traditional and technological environments. As contributing author Dennis Dillon puts it, the ultimate goal of humanities librarians is not to acquire information bytes and bits but to promote integrity: integrity of texts, integrity of selection, the integrity of the collection, and the integrity of the library and its ultimate purpose. This objective underlies this multifaceted and comprehensive collection of articles as the authors address many interesting issues, developments, and challenges in the field, including selecting candidates for digitization and producing e-texts, collecting in areas that don't have immediate utility or that may be unpopular, what librarians need to know about the humanities as a discipline in order to effectively meet the informational and technological needs of their constituencies, online discussion groups as useful sources of webliographic information, cooperative collection building, the importance of maintaining a high degree of local ownership for materials, the principles, criteria, and tools needed to develop a Native American studies collection, document driven and use driven approaches to collecting, acquiring, and preserving records that chronicle the role played by African Americans in the United States, development.

Acquisitions and Collection Development in the Humanities can help professional librarians, graduate school faculty, and students in information and library science acquire the knowledge and skills necessary for building a broadly based and academically responsive collection. It will certainly help you keep up with changes in the information environment and show you how the tools you've developed for selecting traditional library materials will be useful as you grapple with electronic texts, spider search mechanisms on the Web, becoming a webliographer, and budget shortfalls.
