YEARS BETWEEN OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS

THE OLD TESTAMENT

ABOUT

400 YEARS

THE NEW TESTAMENT

Malachi is the Last Prophet of the Old Testament. He lived 100 years after the people returned to Israel from captivity in Babylon. After the difficult days of rebuilding their land, the people slipped into carelessness again. They did not honor their own husbands and wives. The cheated workers of their pay and robbed from poor widows and orphans. They did not think God saw these things.

But Malachi reminded the Jews of the Lord's great love and blessing. "Behold, I will send My messenger, and he shall prepare the way before Me: and the Lord will come to His Temple. On that day, the proud and the evil will be burned like straw. And He shall turn the heart of the father back to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers."

Four hundred years stretched between Old and New Testament times. Nothing new was added to the Bible. The prophets fell silent. During all this period, the nation of Israel was not its own. There had been many wars in that part of the world, and their country had belonged for a time to the Greeks, and to the Egyptians; but in the end it was taken over by the powerful armies of the Roman empire. It was now a province of Rome call Judea, and though it had a ruler of its own, Herod, was under the control of the Roman Emperor, or Caesar Augustus. The Jewish people suffered greatly under foreign rulers. They were forbidden to worship in the Temple and forced to eat unclean food.

People remembered the promises of their prophets. Someday God would send the Messiah to set them free. "How long, O Lord?" they cried.

And then, something momentous happened. A baby was born—a baby unlike any who had ever come before. By introducing this baby who grew into the man Jesus, the book of Matthew opens a whole new section of the Bible—the New Testament.
