In a second step, the characteristics of female detective novels in opposite to male detective novels are highlighted, whereas the analysis is focused on lady detectives and female roles, motives and topics and adaptation to male manner of speaking. In a last step, the appeal of detective novels for women writers is analysed. It was shown that female detective novels are not a separate sub-genre but a separate field within the genre of detective novels. However, women writers gave the genre new impulses helping to develop it.

Detecting Texts Patricia Merivale, Susan Elizabeth Sweeney, 2011-06-07. Although readers of detective fiction ordinarily expect to learn the mystery's solution at the end, there is another kind of detective story, the history of which encompasses writers as diverse as Poe, Borges, Robbe-Grillet, Auster and Stephen King, that ends with a question rather than an answer. The detective not only fails to solve the crime but also confronts insoluble mysteries of interpretation and identity. As the contributors to Detecting Texts contend, such stories belong to a distinct genre, the metaphysical detective story, in which the detective hero's inability to interpret the mystery inevitably casts doubt on the reader's similar attempt to make sense of the text and the world. Detecting Texts includes an introduction by the editors that defines the metaphysical detective story and traces its history from Poe's classic tales to today's postmodernist experiments. In addition to the editors, contributors include Stephen Bernstein, Joel Black, John T. Irwin, Jeffrey T. Nealon and others.

The Red House Mystery Alan Alexander Milne, 1922. In the tradition of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories, this mystery by the author of the Winnie the Pooh book is set in the English countryside in a stately British mansion with an
