Analytical Biogeography:

Analytical Biogeography A.A. Myers, P. Giller, 2013-12-11 Biogeography may be defined simply as the study of the geographical distribution of organisms but this simple definition hides the great complexity of the subject Biogeography transcends classical subject areas and involves a range of scientific disciplines that includes geography geology and biology Not surprisingly therefore it means rather different things to different people Historically the study of biogeography has been concentrated into compartments at separate points along a spatio-temporal gradient At one end of the gradient ecological biogeography is concerned with ecological processes occurring over short temporal and small spatial scales whilst at the other end historical biogeography is concerned with evolutionary processes over millions of years on a large often global scale Between these end points lies a third major compartment concerned with the profound effects of Pleistocene glaciations and how these have affected the distribution of recent organisms Within each of these compartments along the scale gradient a large number of theories hypotheses and models have been proposed in an attempt to explain the present and past biotic distribution patterns To a large extent these compartments of the subject have been non-interactive which is understandable from the different interests and backgrounds of the various researchers Nevertheless the distributions of organisms across the globe cannot be fully understood without a knowledge of the full spectrum of ecological and historical processes There are no degrees in biogeography and today's biogeographers are primarily born out of some other discipline

Analytical Biogeography Paul S Giller, 1988-08-04      Cladistic Biogeography Christopher J. Humphries, Lynne R. Parenti, 1999-04-15 The distribution and classification of life on earth has long been of interest to biological theorists as well as to travellers and explorers Cladistic biogeography is the study of the historical and evolutionary relationships between species based on their particular distribution patterns across the earth Analysis of the distributions of species in different areas of the world can tell us how those species and areas are related what regions or larger groups of areas exist and what their origins might be The first edition of Cladistic Biogeography was published in 1986 It was a concise exposition of the history methods applications of and prospects for cladistic biogeography Well reviewed and widely used in teaching Cladistic Biogeography is still in demand despite having been out of print for some time This new edition draws on a wide range of examples both plant and animal from marine terrestrial and freshwater habitats It has been updated throughout with the chapters being rewritten and expanded to incorporate the latest research findings and theoretical and methodological advances in this dynamic field      Evolutionary Biogeography of the Marine Algae of the North Atlantic David J. Garbary, G. Robin South, 2013-06-29 Algal systematists geologists and evolutionary biologists provide a synthesis of the evolutionary biogeography of red brown and green algae of the North Atlantic Ocean also considering their relationships with species and genera in the Arctic and Pacific Oceans as well as other subtropical and tropical seas The history of the Atlantic Basin and its connections to other ocean basins is treated from the geological paleontological and paleoclimatic perspective This is contrasted with biogeographic analyses of marine animal systems and the role of plant animal interactions in evolution Some of the approaches include traditional systematic studies cladistic analysis the experimental evaluation of environment in establishing distribution limits and the application of molecular biology Biogeography and Geological Evolution of SE Asia Robert Hall,Jeremy Daniel Holloway,1998 International Conference Paleobiogeography and Paleocology 2001, Piacenza and Castell'Arquato, Italy, May 31-June 2, 2001 Paola Monegatti,2002 Studies on Ecology and Palaeoecology of Benthic Communities Ruggero Matteucci,Maria Gabriella Carboni,Johannes S.
