

Roll 10 for X
X to Play 3-2
(O 6-5 O)

X moves 9/6, 20/18. X has passed up the opportunity to hit O again and to cross his bar point, 24/21*, 9/7, which would make a 3-point prime. He has also given up the twenty point. Has X gone mad?

No, X is no longer interested in a 3-point prime; his main concern is to complete the close-out. X wants to be able to hit O on the two point should he re-enter. By using the 3 to bring a man into the six point 9/6, X creates a second ladder bearing directly on the two point. The idea here is to either make the two point directly on one roll, or to hit O on the two point if he re-enters and then cover the point if he fails to come in.

What about 24/21? It is not really necessary for X to hit the blot on the twenty-one point, if X completes the close-out, he will easily be in a position to gammon O since O has not advanced far from the starting position with most of his men. If X wishes, he can probably hit this blot later at his leisure.

However, for technical reasons to be discussed later, if X closes O out and begins to bear off, it is probably safer for him with only two men on the bar rather than three. Hitting the third man may actually be a liability.

X can now afford to give up the twenty point because he is not in immediate danger. With two men on the bar against a 5-point board, O no longer presents a threat.

As a general rule, whenever your opponent has two or more men on the bar (whether you have a 5-point board or not), you should not be concerned about blots outside your inner board. Remember that even if your opponent rolls a good number, he must use the full roll to bring both his men in (with the exception of doubles, which would enable him to move elsewhere as well). He therefore has no numbers left to hit you with. When your opponent has two men on the bar, then, take advantage of this opportunity to deploy your men well and diversify your ladders.

The indicated play 9/6, 20/18 is also superior to an alternate play 9/6, 24/22 for a technical reason. Let's compare the positions which result from both

Correct Play: Roll 10 for X
(X 3-2 9/6, 20/18)

Alternate Move: Roll 10 for X
(X 3-2 9/6, 24/22)

What would happen if your next roll was 3-3? If you had played 9/6, 24/22, your three back men would be unable to move. You would be forced to take the entire roll with your remaining men. In order to maintain a 5-point board, you would have to switch points 5/2(2) and play 7/1, killing a checker (that is, taking it permanently out of play).

By correctly moving 9/6, 20/18, you can see that 3-3 subsequently plays without having to give up the five point or kill a man. It is important to be aware of freak rolls which could destroy your position on the next move.
