Analogy Challenge (7th to 9th)

Analogy—a word puzzle that you solve by figuring out the relationship between one pair of words to complete a second pair having the same relationship.

Example: hungry : famished :: evil : despicable

These words are synonyms—hungry and famished. So, the analogy is completed with a word that is a synonym for evil. Notice that famished is really hungry, just like despicable is really evil.

Remember that analogies show many types of relationships. The first step is to figure out the relationship between the first two words: are they synonyms, antonyms, parts and wholes? This will help you think about the relationship you need to show between the second pair of words.

Exercise:

Choose the answer that best completes the analogy.

Plain Speaking Rachel Reichman, Bolt, Beranek and Newman, Inc, 1981 This report presents an abstract process model of well formed discourse The model is based on a hierarchical segmentation of utterances into distinct but related and linked context spaces Context spaces are characterized by slots similar to case frames The slots are functionally defined and they capture information both explicit and implicit in the dialogue In a context space theory of discourse a conversation is viewed as a sequence of conversational moves A conversational move corresponds to a speaker's communicative goal Support Interrupt and Challenge are some of the communicative goals identified in the work All conversational moves have an associated set of preconditions which specify the requisite discourse context for their appropriate performance Conversational moves also have a set of effects on the discourse structure and different modes of fulfillment A major aspect of the work is to delineate the different preconditions effects and modes characterizing different types of conversational moves in a discourse It is shown that effective communication between conversants is enabled by their following a number of well specified rules in a discourse These rules include choice of reference to an entity under discussion and use of clue words like But anyway and Incidentally The Triumph of Unarmed Forces (1914-1918) ... Montagu W.
