

Factors Contributing to Political Behaviour: Politics is an essential skill in manager who wish to get things done. The art of how to get people on your side is crucial and has an impact on human resource.

1. Individual Factors:

High Self Monitor • More sensitive to social cues • Exhibits higher levels of social conformity, and • More likely to be skilled in political behaviour

Individuals With An Internal Locus Of Control • More prone to take a proactive stance • Attempt to manipulate situations in their favour

High Machiavellian Personality • Will to manipulate, and • Desire for power – is comfortable using politics as a means to further his or her self-interest

Organisational Investment • The more a person has invested in the organisation, in terms of expectations of increased future benefits, the more that person has to lose if forced out and the less likely he or she is to use illegitimate means.

Perceived Job Alternatives • The more alternative job opportunities an individual has – due to a favourable job market or the possession of scarce skills or knowledge, a prominent reputation, or influential contacts outside the organisation – the more likely that individual is to risk illegitimate political actions.

2. Organizational Factors:

Declining Resources • People may engage in political actions to safeguard what they have • Stimulate conflict and increase politicking

Promotion Opportunities • Encourages people to compete for a limited resource • Try to positively influence the decision outcome

Low Trust • The higher the level of political behaviour, and • The more likely that the political behaviour will be of the illegitimate kind.

Role Ambiguity • Means that the prescribed behaviours of the employee are not clear.

Unclear Performance Evaluation System • Subjective performance criteria • Single outcome measure • The amount of time that elapses between an action and its appraisal

Democratic Decision Making • Managers in these organisations are being asked to behave more democratically. • They are told that they should allow employees to advise them on decisions and that they should rely to a greater extent on group input into the decision process

High Performance Pressures • The more pressure that employees feel to perform well, the more likely they are to engage in politicking.

Self-Serving Senior Managers • When employees see the people on top engaging in political behaviour, especially when they do so successfully and are rewarded for it, a climate is created that supports politicking.

In the writing of prefaces for works of this sort most editors report being faced with similar challenges and have much in common in relating how these challenges are met They acknowledge that their paramount objective is to provide more than an overview of topics but rather to offer selective critical reviews that will serve to advance theory and research in the particular area reviewed The question of the appropriate audience to be addressed is usually answered by directing material to a potential audience of social scientists graduate students and occasionally advanced undergraduate students Editors who are confronted with the problem of structuring their material often explore various means by which their social science discipline might be subdivided then generally conclude that no particular classification strategy is superior In elaborating on the process by which the enterprise was initiated editors typically resort to a panel of luminaries who provide independent support for the idea and then offer both suggestions for topics and the authors who will write them Editors usually concede that chapter topics and content do not reflect their original conception but are a compromise between their wishes and the authors expertise and capabilities Editors report that inevitable delays occur authors drop out of projects and are replaced and new topics are introduced Finally editors frequently confess that the final product is incomplete with gaps occurring because of failed commitments by authors or because authors could not be secured to write certain chapters

The Analysis of Political Behaviour; an Empirical Approach, by Harold D. Lasswell Harold Dwight Lasswell, Political Psychology of Turkish Political Behavior Cengiz Erisen, 2016-04-14 The primary motivation for this book is to focus on something crucial that is missing in Turkish political science well founded theories on the Turkish voter and empiricism in scholarly research Given the absence of such theories one could ask what then the best model is for explaining a Turkish citizen's vote choice and political behaviour and what schools of thought Turkish political science has Unfortunately it is not possible to offer a satisfactory response to either question at this point and among the clear deficiencies in the current literature the primary one is the lack of a robust model explaining how Turkish citizens form their political attitudes engage in political participation or cast their votes With these important questions in mind this book aims to generate an interest in the theoretical and methodological tools that one can employ to conduct research contributing to the needs of the literature particularly in political behaviour and political psychology This book expands our understanding about the processes and the mechanisms of Turkish political behaviour and contributes to the foundations of theory building in the literature This book was published as a special issue of Turkish Studies
