Analyzing Children's Art:

Analyzing Children's Art Rhoda Kellogg, 1970 In her book entitled Analyzing Children's Art Rhoda Kellogg discusses many drawings made by young children She has studied hundred of thousands of drawings produced not to hang in a museum or gallery but rather to express very youthful thoughts and feelings These expressions were produced by hands making drawing movements while holding a pencil pen crayon or brush Often the art of older children is made by looking at a physical object and trying to draw or paint a reasonable facsimile of that object The art of much younger children isn't produced by looking at an object and then trying to draw or paint an imitation of a model The younger artist is just moving his or her hand in expression of an urge or a feeling from within the body itself Rhoda Kellogg discusses these drawings and calls them the basic scribbles

Analyzing Children's Art Rhoda Kellogg, 2015 Drawing from her study of approximately one million drawings by children Rhoda Kellogg traces the mental and artistic development of children from infancy to eight years of age defining and classifying the forms common to children's art throughout the world Kellogg renders a realistic account of children's art in a variety of media and demonstrates how and why their art develops over time Incorporating ample visual examples and detailed analyses this widely cited study provides the essentials to identifying cognitive development and educational needs evidenced in children's art An indispensable guide for teachers and counselors specializing in early education Analyzing Children's Art demonstrates how art plays an undeniably important role in a child's mental growth

Hand-held Visions DeeDee Halleck,2002 For almost forty years DeeDee Halleck has been involved in a variety of projects that involve media making by non professionals Her goal has been to develop a critical sense of the potential and limitations of mediated communication through practical exercises that generate a sense of both individual and non hierarchical group power over the various apparati of media and electronic technology Hand Held Visions is a collection of essays presentations and lectures that she has written throughout this process Halleck starts with a discussion of her own development as a teacher producer and an active participant in the struggle for media democracy She gives the reader a historical first person perspective on the community based media movement and a sense of the determination and resolve that have enabled often fragile and much embattled organizations and individuals to survive in a climate dominated by global media corporations that are in direct opposition to their work

Children's Stress and Coping Elaine Shaw Sorensen,1993-04-09 In spite of the increase in stress coping research little is known about how stress is actually perceived by children in the family setting This is due in part to the real difficulties involved in collecting data on children s subjective experiences In addition what we currently know about children s stress and coping has traditionally derived from adult reporters rather than from the children themselves Filling a gap in the literature this volume explores theoretical and methodological issues related to the study of children and families in general and to stress coping phenomena from the child s perspective in particular The book challenges traditional deference to adult assessment of stress and coping among children by drawing data from both parents and children revealing significant contrasts between the two Through open ended qualitative measures of children s diaries and drawings the book offers a glimpse into the inner world of the child and gives scholarly expression to the fact that children can and readily will articulate needs and perceptions if given an appropriate vehicle The book s well documented chapters discuss traditional approaches to stress and coping implications for current child and family study specific needs related to the study of children within the family and implications for theory and methods Taxonomies of children s stressors coping responses and coping resources are drawn from the data and examined in detail The book concludes with suggestions for future research and clinical practice Providing fascinating insight into children s actual experience of stress and coping this volume lays the groundwork for ongoing research scholarship and therapeutic practice Academicians practitioners and graduate students in family studies child development psychology and nursing will find this book invaluable in shedding light on the often overlooked culture of children
