Attitudes And Decisions:

Attitudes and Decisions J Richard Eiser, Joop van der Pligt, 2015-08-20 The concept of attitude has long been a central part of social psychological theories It is important in other disciplines too such as economics business studies politics and sociology Originally published in 1988 the authors of this text show how attitudes and motives are crucial in human decision making and explore the relationship between them They look closely at the real context of people s attitudes and behaviour pointing out that attitudes are both a social product and an intrinsic part of social action The authors show that theories of judgment attitudes attribution and decision making can make important contributions to social issues such as the employment of nuclear energy the storage of nuclear waste health behaviour and medical decision making They emphasize that social psychology is relevant to a wide variety of social issues deriving from the theoretical and distinctive methods that social psychology has developed

Attitudes and Behavioral Decisions Arnold Upmeyer, 2012-12-06 This book summarizes theoretical and empirical work that was performed in a large scale cross university research project on the relationship between attitudes and behavior The entire program has been funded by the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft DFG an institution that operates similarly to the American National Science Foundation In 1981 the DFG ruled to release the project for a five year period with the option to extend if the extension proposal would suggest a major alteration of research goals The participants are presently in the stage of transition between the first five year allotment and the granted extension We feel that this is the most opportune time to summarize the development of the project for an international audience Until now only scattered publications have existed This book is more than just a compilation of previously published results Rather it is the original contributions and a substantial share of newly published empirical results that guarantee an up to date exposition of the entire program The general goal of the research group is to perform basic research in attaining explanations for the relationships between attitude and behavior and to improve the predictability of current predictor models In pursuing this goal we are not primarily interested in the immediate strategy of redefining predictor variables within the framework of the general linear statistical model Rather we emphasize cognitive processes and structures that predispose a person s behavior that accompany behavior or that change as a result of prior behavior

Stress, Attitudes, and Decisions Irving Lester Janis, 1982 The Multiple Roles of Attitudes in Decision Making David M.

Sanbonmatsu, Samuel Vanous, Steven S. Posavac, 2012 Introductory paragraphs An examination of the literature on decision making reveals a surprising neglect of the attitude construct Although the evaluative processes that are fundamental to choice have been a basic staple of attitudes research for decades this enormous body of work is commonly ignored in discussions of decision making Decision theorists infrequently make references to predictive models of attitudes and behavior such as information integration theory e g Anderson 1974 and the theory of reasoned action e g Ajzen rather they influence choice in conjunction with routines and other decision relevant representations As a consequence the effect of attitudes is often dependent on the activation of these constructs The chapter moves on to examine the co development and functionality of global attitudes and routines We then discuss the conditions under which attitudes influence decisions and behavior Finally the chapter closes with arguments for linking research on attitudes with theory on choice Attitude Structure and Function Anthony R. Pratkanis, Steven J. Breckler, Anthony G. Greenwald, 2014-03-18 Utilizing new wave research including new psychological theories new statistical techniques and a stronger methodology this collection unites a diversity of recent research perspectives on attitudes and the psychological functions of an attitude The objective of the editors was to bring together the bits and pieces of validated data into one systematic and adequate set of general principles leading to the view of attitudes as predictions As the volume reformulates old concepts explores new angles and seeks a relationship among various sub areas it also shows improvements in the sophistication of research designs and methodologies the specifications of variables and the precision in defining concepts The Role of Attitudes in Memory-based Decision Making David Mitsuo Sanbonmatsu, 1988 Educational Review, 1928 Vols 19 34 include Bibliography of education for 1899 1906 compiled by James I Wyer and others Publication[s].
