their stamps in multiple languages and what can a scientific name in Latin tell you about when the stamp was designed We'll answer all these questions and more as we meet lions prowling the savannas of Central Africa pandas munching bamboo in China's misty mountains and fish eagles swooping over Zambian lakes You'll encounter wolves in the Carpathian Mountains cheetahs on the plains of West Africa and even a striped hyena trotting through the Middle Eastern desert Along the way you'll discover creatures you might never have heard of like the pimble nosed chameleon from Madagascar the gray bamboo lemur that eats cyanide filled plants and the ghost bat of northern Australia that hunts other bats in the dark You'll learn why the European otter's poop matters how a mongoose can take on a cobra and survive and what makes the African fish eagle's call the voice of Africa We'll explore banded mongooses in Tanzania Barbary sheep in Mauritania and even a marlin racing through the tropical waters of the Maldives But this isn't just about animals Each chapter teaches you how to decode a stamp finding the country name even when it's in Arabic Polish or Mongolian Cyrillic identifying the currency and year of issue spotting the designer's signature and understanding why certain animals appear on certain stamps You'll see how countries use stamps to celebrate their wildlife raise awareness about endangered species earn revenue from collectors and share their natural heritage with the world Some of these stamps come from countries that don't even exist anymore like Czechoslovakia East Germany and Upper Volta Others feature animals whose scientific names have changed as scientists learned more about how species are related And many showcase conservation success stories species that were once nearly extinct but are now thriving thanks to dedicated protection efforts At the end of each chapter I give you a detective challenge questions to investigate online facts to hunt down on Wikipedia videos to find on YouTube and mysteries to solve about both the animals and the countries that honored them on stamps Because the real fun isn't just in reading about these creatures It is in becoming a wildlife detective yourself following the clues wherever they lead So let's start our journey in the Republic of the Congo where a male lion is striding across the savanna with his magnificent mane flowing in the breeze Thirty stamps thirty animals thirty countries and countless discoveries waiting for you to uncover Ready Let's explore
