INTRODUCTION

Literature reflects the tendencies of the age in which it is produced and there is always a supreme literary artist who becomes the mouthpiece of his age and gives expression to its hopes and aspirations, its fads and fetishes, its fears and doubts, its prosperity or poverty and its enterprise in his works. Chaucer symbolizes the Middle Age. He stands in much the same relation to the life of his time as Pope does to the earlier phases of the eighteenth century, the Age of Neoclassicism, and Tennyson to the Victorian era in the later nineteenth century; and his place in English Literature is even more important than theirs.

So far as religious belief is concerned, Pope was not a representative of his age. He was a Roman Catholic whereas the majority of Englishmen in his age were Protestants, with a fair sprinkling of Puritans among them. However, Pope never asserts his religion anywhere in his work. He faithfully represents his Age, its social, intellectual life and literary tendencies in the poems such as "The Rape of the Lock", "Dunciad", "Essay on Man", and "Essay on Criticism". In "The Rape of the Lock", Pope satirically portrays the frivolous pursuits and affected life of the upper-class ladies of his age in the person and activities of Belinda. "The Essay on Man" is, likewise, an attempt to present the philosophical and intellectual principles of his Age. In the "Dunciad", Pope lets loose the floodgates of scurrilous satire attacking the political strife of the age and the low moral standards to which the wits had fallen in those days. Like Pope, Tennyson was equally the mouthpiece of the Victorian society, and represented the ideas, traditions, hopes and aspirations of the people. He reflected the fancies and sentiments of the Victorian England. In the "Princes", Tennyson associates himself with

Geoffrey Chaucer Geoffrey Chaucer, Michael Alexander, 1980 The Canterbury Tales: the General Prologue Geoffrey Chaucer, 2017-08-12 The Canterbury Tales recounts the stories told by pilgrims to one another as they make their way from London to Canterbury Cathedral This volume contains the introduction to those tales by describing the characters who are embarking upon that pilgrimage The facing page contains Chaucer's original text as it was written in fourteenth century Middle English Alongside there is room in the wide outer margins for students to write their own notes on The General Prologue or perhaps to define unfamiliar key words The reverse side of each page contains a new translation into modern English The translation into modern English differs only slightly from those found elsewhere Here the key difference is that lines are translated separately thereby avoiding the problem seen in some translations that words are borrowed from adjacent lines to help maintain Chaucer's rhyming structure Accordingly this translation adheres more closely to Chaucer's own words although in doing so it may occasionally contain rather more descriptive explanations than is usual in translated works Nevertheless this word for word approach will greatly assist those new to Chaucer's middle English Parents will be pleased that The General Prologue contains no lewdness or vulgarity as can be found in some of the other Canterbury Tales In this regard it may appropriately be studied at Middle School level This volume contains the complete and unabridged text with line numbers a helpful translation and a personal study notebook which means it offers excellent value for money The translator was educated at St Chad's College Durham Warwick Exeter and De Montfort Universities Lately he was both a Hardwicke and Sir Thomas More scholar of Lincoln's Inn London His publications include works on English law and literature
