

atmospheric interactions

- The atmosphere and oceans exchange CO_2 --dissolves in cold polar water and sinks into the deep ocean. It is released by "outgassing" in warm upwelling water near the equator.
- Sea ice hinders the exchanges of heat, water, and gases between atmosphere and oceans. Reflects light.
- The biosphere – where plants and animals live both on land and in the ocean -- influences the carbon dioxide concentration in the atmosphere through photosynthesis and respiration.
- The terrestrial biosphere influences the water cycle by taking in liquid water from the soils and releasing it as water vapor (evapotranspiration) to the atmosphere.
- The optical properties (i.e., the albedo) of the biosphere (land cover) and cloud cover influence how much solar radiation is reflected upward.
