divide between the approaches of systems developers and those of social scientists to computer supported cooperative work a question that has been vigorously debated in the systems development literature Traditionally developers have been trained in formal methods and oriented to engineering and formal theoretical problems many social scientists in the CSCW field come from humanistic traditions in which results are reported in a narrative mode In spite of their differences in style the two groups have been cooperating more and more in the last decade as the people problems associated with computing become increasingly evident to everyone The authors have been encouraged to examine rigorously and in depth the theoretical basis of CSCW With contributions from field leaders in the United Kingdom France Scandinavia Mexico and the United States this volume offers an exciting overview of the cutting edge of research and theory It constitutes a solid foundation for the rapidly coalescing field of social informatics Divided into three parts this volume covers social theory design theory and the sociotechnical system with respect to CSCW The first set of chapters looks at ways of rethinking basic social categories with the development of distributed collaborative computing technology concepts of the group technology information user and text The next section concentrates more on the lessons that can be learned at the design stage given that one wants to build a CSCW system incorporating these insights what kind of work does one need to do and how is understanding of design affected The final part looks at the integration of social and technical in the operation of working sociotechnical systems Collectively the contributors make the argument that the social and technical are irremediably linked in practice and so the great divide not only should be a thing of the past it should never have existed in the first place
