Sweets from Morocco Jo Verity, 2008 Tessa and Lewis are a bit unnerved by the imminent appearance of a baby sibling. When the somewhat wrinkled Gordon arrives to disrupt their perfect childhood, they decide that something must be done. Secretly, they construct an effigy and transport it away from the house across the forbidden highway to the phone box around the corner. They don't wish Gordon dead, just gone. To their great surprise, he does from his pram parked outside the paper shop when their father pops in for cigarettes. In the space of minutes, the family's lives are turned upside down forever.

Mother Knew Best Dorothy Scannell, 2016-01-04 Cheer up said Mother. Don't make your unhappy life miserable. Before Jennifer Worth and other East End memoirists, there was Dorothy Dolly Scannell. In the East End of Dolly's childhood, people met poverty and hardship with unfailing optimism and humour. Dolly grew up with nine brothers and sisters, her father a plumber earning 2 a week and a man who believed that all aristocratic men were disease ridden and possessed bald-headed wives because of the rich food and wine they consumed and of course Mother who cared for her large brood with rare wisdom, laughter, and unbounded love. The menagerie also occasionally included members of the animal kingdom, but no mere cats and dogs; instead, there were chinchillas, cannibalistic chickens, a ferocious eel kept in a pail of water, and even eventually the pride of Mother's wardrobe, a kangaroo fur coat. With the sure touch of a natural storyteller who combines a perfect memory with a true writer's gift, Dolly vividly recreates her childhood world: the streets in which she played and the playground where she was rescued from a child molester, the local shops and the adulterated goods sold within the new house that her father was going to pay for with his ever madder schemes to make a fortune, such as a revolutionary kind of truss. A proper treat, I can tell you, bright as Pearlie buttons, colourful as a street market. Evening Standard.
