Bahrain Political Development In A Modernizing Society:

Bahrain Emile Nakhleh, 2011-05-09 The book is a study of political development in Bahrain during the first five years after its independence in 1971. It is based on field research done by the author as the first senior Fulbright scholar in that country. The book was banned in Bahrain for 30 years but was allowed to be published in Arabic in that country in 2006. The study focuses on the tribal structure of Bahraini society and the rule of a minority Sunni government by the al Khalifa family over a largely disenfranchised Shia majority. To examine the making of the new state, the book analyzes the nature and characteristics of the Bahraini tribal society, the educational system of modern Bahrain, the nature of the political system and popular demands for participation in decision making. The book also examines the making of the new constitution, the first ever national election to both the Constitutional Assembly and the National Assembly, and the electoral campaigns and candidates. The book also discusses the restrictions on freedoms of speech and assembly, the denial of women the right to vote, the banning of political parties, and the role of clubs as surrogate political gathering places. The exclusion of the Shia majority from the economic and political centers of power and the absence of government accountability and transparency. The February 2011 popular uprising in Bahrain underscores some of the key challenges discussed in the book, especially the autocratic nature of the regime and the urgency of political reform for domestic stability. Political Repression in Bahrain

Marc Owen Jones, 2020-07-16 From torture to fake news, this book lays out how the Bahrain regime has used political repression and violence to fight social movements. Political Transformation of Gulf Tribal States Shaul Yanai, 2014-09-01 The reform movements and attempts to establish parliamentary institutions in the Persian Gulf states of Kuwait, Bahrain, and Dubai between the First World War and the independent era of the 1970s were not inspired by western example or by any tradition of civil representation. The move to a parliamentary system not only represented a milestone in the history of the region, creating a legacy for future generations, but was a unique transition in the Arab world. The transformation of these states from loose chiefdoms of minimal coherence and centralization into centralizing and institutionalized monarchies involved the setting up of primary institutions of government, the demarcation of borders, and establishment of a monarchical order. As this new political and social order evolved, ideas of national struggle and national rights penetrated Gulf societies. Gulf citizens who had spent time in Arab states, mostly in Egypt and Iraq, took part in the genesis of a public Arab Gulf national discourse, enabling the Gulf population to become acquainted with national struggles for independence. As a result, merchants of notable families, newly educated elements, and even workers began to oppose the dominance of the rulers. Both the rulers and the commercial elites, including members of the ruling families, tried to formulate a new and different social contract with the rulers, seeking to entrench their political power by using new administrative means and financial power. Opposition against this current crystallized in 1938 among the ranks of the commercial oligarchy, as well as within the ruling families. In spite of its failure to create its own political institutions, the oligarchy remained the foremost social and economic class But the ruling families could no longer treat national oil revenues as their private income and they began to channel part of these funds to public needs The most important consequence of the 1938 movement was the formation of a new social contract between the two traditional power centers the governing structures were fitted into the political and economic reality brought about by the oil wealth but remained essentially tribal and committed to the power division between the major Gulf families

State Formation and Identity in the Middle East and North Africa K. Christie,M. Masad,2013-12-17 For states in the Middle East North Africa and South Asia the Arab Spring has had different implications and consequences stemming from the politics of identity and the historical and political processes that have shaped development This book focuses on how these factors interact with globalization and affect state formation

Uprisings in Bahrain and Syria Aisha Hadi Al-Rashdi,2026-01-22 The book explores the transformation and eventual dismissal of the reform intentions following the 2011 Uprisings highlighting the shift toward survival struggles and the normalization of authoritarian regimes It features diverse perspectives from activists political leaders and ordinary citizens in Bahrain and Syria humanizing the narrative by showcasing personal experiences related to the Uprisings This book examines the complex dynamics of sectarian identities during pivotal state formation processes and uprisings analyzing how securitization and de securitization have influenced political landscapes in Bahrain and Syria Additionally the book provides essential historical context for understanding the emergence of the Arab Uprisings by tracing the roots of political discontent sectarian tensions and socioeconomic grievances A deep historical analysis the book will serve as a valuable resource for academics students and policymakers in Middle Eastern studies Asian studies politics and international relations
