H. Denoon,2023-06-13 With the end of the Cold War and the visibility of U S Patriot missile defenses during the 1991 Gulf War the cost and benefits of ballistic missile defense systems BMD need to be re evaluated In this detailed and balanced study David Denoon assesses new types of short range and intercontinental missile defenses In the post Cold War era two fundamental changes have made missile defense for the United States and its military forces more compelling The United States and Russia no longer see each other as direct threats and there has been a dramatic proliferation of ballistic missile capability in the Third World Consequently U S forces deployed overseas are more likely to be at risk and eventually the United States itself could become vulnerable to missile threats With these changes in mind David Denoon analyzes the current BMD dilemma arguing that active defenses against missiles should be seen as a form of insurance against catastrophe He assesses the likelihood of missile attacks and the appropriate level of investment for the United States to defend against such attacks The book provides an assessment of deterrence and the performance of the Patriot missiles during the 1991 Gulf War critiques the Strategic Defense Initiative and analyzes the prospects for new types of short range and intercontinental missile defenses Ballistic Missile Defense in the Post-cold War Era Matthew James Mowthorpe,1997 Ballistic Missile Defense In The Post-cold War Era David B H Denoon,2021-11-28 With the end of the Cold War and the visibility of U S Patriot missile defenses during the 1991 Gulf War the cost and benefits of ballistic missile defense systems BMD need to be re evaluated In this detailed and balanced study David Denoon assesses new types of short range and intercontinental missile defenses In the post Cold War era two fundamental changes have made missile defense for the United States and its military forces more compelling The United States and Russia no longer see each other as direct threats and there has been a dramatic proliferation of ballistic missile capability in the Third World. Consequently, U.S. forces deployed overseas are more likely to be at risk and eventually the United States itself could become vulnerable to missile threats. With these changes in mind, David Denoon analyzes the current BMD dilemma, arguing that active defenses against missiles should be seen as a form of insurance against catastrophe. He assesses the likelihood of missile attacks and the appropriate level of investment for the United States to defend against such attacks. The book provides an assessment of deterrence and the performance of the Patriot missiles during the 1991 Gulf War, critiques the Strategic Defense Initiative, and analyzes the prospects for new types of short range and intercontinental missile defenses.

US Ballistic Missile Defense and Deterrence Postures Grzegorz Nycz, 2020-01-21. This book discusses most recent developments in the area of US ballistic missile defense with an eye on its battlefield capacities since the Kuwait war, analyzed from the perspective of deterrence postures encompassing the key post-Cold War security challenges: Middle East, Far East, Eastern Europe. The analyzed cases of missile defense engagements included after the Desert Storm Operation, Iraqi Freedom, Israeli operations against Hamas and Yemen war. The theoretical base of the book relies on the waves of deterrence theory since the early years of the nuclear age through the deployment of thermonuclear warheads, nuclear plenty, and the late Cold War revisions of deterrence paradigms. The main body of the book is exploring the historical and probabilistic evidence on missile defense accuracy in various scenarios of its employment and differing layered short, medium, and long range systems of the US counterballistic technologies. Historically, the missile defense investments since the early thermonuclear range were challenging the Mutual Assured Destruction paradigm. Notably, after the partial marginalization of US long range missile defense concepts of the 1960s, seen as incompatible with the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty between the US and USSR, missile defense constructions were reinvigorated through Reagan's 1983 Strategic Defense Initiative, while post-1976 Patriot tactical air and missile defense were gradually winning arms contracts. As in the post-Cold War age, the value of extended deterrence grew. New post-Cold War missile defense investments included the Middle Eastern US allies as well as Japan and South Korea, threatened by DPRK nuclear and ballistic experiments. Importantly, the value of extended missile defense engagements became broader, visible in the era of New Cold War between Russia and the West, when new Aegis Ashore bases in Romania and Poland proved the theater range missile defense capacity of new NATO members. Grzegorz Nycz, Ph.D., is adjunct professor at the Pedagogical University of Cracow's Institute of Political Science. He graduated from Jagiellonian University and Cracow University of Economics. Ryoichi Sasakawa Young Leaders Fellowship Fund Fellow (2007-2008). His research refers to U.S. security and foreign policy with a special focus on nuclear deterrence and ballistic missile defense postures. His recent publications include monographs on strategic balance and U.S. national security policy and texts in periodicals related to ballistic missile defense investments as well as U.S. military political engagements in Eastern Europe, Middle East, and East Asia in the time of the New Cold War between Russia and the West. Glossary To Defend and Deter is the product of a 2 year effort by personnel from the Tri Services Cultural Resources Research Center located at the U S Army Construction Engineering Research Laboratories USACERL working in cooperation with Dr Cameron and other members of the military history community The goal of this effort was to develop a history and reference guide suitable for use in identifying and evaluating the historical significance of missile related cultural resources The authors have supplied the information necessary to locate identify and understand Army and Air Force guided missile facilities This coupled with evaluative guidelines currently being developed within DoD will help cultural resources personnel make substantive evaluations Excerpt The Development of the Defensive Missile Force The primary responsibility for defending the United States against air attack rested with the Air Force To accomplish this mission the Air Force developed a defense in depth strategy that encompassed early warning radars fighter aircraft and long range anti-aircraft missiles positioned to detect and engage the enemy before they entered American airspace If the enemy penetrated this outer layer the last line of defense was the Army s anti-aircraft missile batteries that defended key urban industrial and military targets
The long range anti-aircraft missile was the Air Force s BOMARC Development began in 1946 but the first units were not deployed until 1959 BOMARC resembled a long sleek fighter with sharply swept wings The 45 foot missile was powered by ramjet engines and traveled at nearly four times the speed of sound It had an effective range of 440 miles and could carry either a conventional or nuclear warhead During the 1960s eight BOMARC missile squadrons were deployed along the eastern seaboard and in the midwest The Army s contribution to the air defense network was the Nike anti-aircraft missile

Strategic Thinking, Deterrence and the US Ballistic Missile Defense Project Reuben Steff, 2016-04-01 A systematic critical survey of American strategic thinking and the strategic culture in which it is formed In particular this book seeks to interrogate the theory and strategy of nuclear deterrence and its relationship to the concept of missile defence Drawing widely on the theoretical literature in international relations and strategic studies it identifies the key groups that have competed over America s nuclear policy post 1945 and examines how the concept of missile defence went through a process of gestation and intellectual contestation leading to its eventual legitimization in the late 1990s Steff sheds light on the individuals groups institutions and processes that led to the decision by the Bush administration to deploy a national missile defence shield Additionally Steff systematically examines the impact deployment had on the calculations of Russia and China In the process he explains that their reactions under the Bush administration have continued into the Obama era revealing that a new great power security dilemma has broken out This Steff shows has led to a decline in great power relations as a consequence The Almanac of the Unelected, 1999
