The Four-Minute Mile

John Bale,David Howe,2020-11-25 Breaking records and challenging the limits of human ability are central to much of our understanding of athletic track and field sports with a world record title arguably as valued as an Olympic gold medal Some particular limits and records take on greater significance however as in the case of the Four Minute Mile which was roundly believed to be impossible until Roger Bannister shattered the illusion with half a second to spare in May 1954 These essays look at the background of Bannister s achievement and the meaning that was ascribed to it by the media and the public at large drawing on an array of interdisciplinary and international influences to unpick the legend surrounding an historic moment in our social and sporting past

Heritage is a most compelling modern cause In the last quarter century it has expanded from a small elite pastime to a major popular crusade a crusade to save and celebrate anything and all that we inherit from the past Everything from Euro Disney to the Holocaust Museum from Balkan enmities to the Northern Irish troubles from Elvis memorabilia to the Elgin marbles bears the marks of the cult of heritage Heritage attachments pervade politics and education and form our views on such diverse realms as heredity environment racism and tourism Enthralled by the past we deploy it for present benefits of every kind A goodly heritage persuades us we belong to a community of like minded folk and act within a tradition sanctified by age old experience Heritage is all the more valued in a world where turbulent change and global fears make the present seem frightful and the future fearsome Yet the very zeal with which heritage is pursued leads to countless abuses of the treasured past Roots and relics become weapons to foment hatred of others to warp historical truth to deform our own legacy to further some class or cause Despite new recognition that the world s diverse legacies belong to and require the care of all mankind heritage passions remain animated largely by self regarding chauvinism In Possessed by the Past David Lowenthal explains the rise of this new obsession with the past and shows its power for both good and evil He probes the passions that generate a need to find or invent a prideful past or to mourn a grievous one and shows how they are similar the world over He demonstrates why and how relics ancestry and memory today more than ever become a source of both pride and peril
