In 1877 the All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club organized their inaugural Men's Singles Championship at Worple Road, Wimbledon. The Ladies' Singles was first contested in 1884 and Worple Road remained the home of the Championships until 1911, when, because of their huge popularity as a fashionable sport, the club was forced to move to the present grounds in Church Road.

In 1988 Max Robertson brought the voice of radio to tennis - a role previously only held by the BBC's Miss Lambert, Miss Langton and Miss De Burgh. The Ballad of Worple Road is a love letter to tennis, capturing the spirit of the game and the characters of the players. It is a celebration of the sport and the people who have made it what it is today.
