

Ethical dilemmas in blood transfusion in Jehovah's Witnesses

- It is common knowledge that JW's do not accept blood transfusion, even if life is threatened. This refutation is supported in the biblical texts Genesis and Leviticus, which recommend the faithful to abstain from meat for considering that it has a soul, and that the assimilation of blood in the organism by the mouth or the veins would violate God's law.
- The JW's affirm that the human being's soul lies in the blood and, as such, it cannot be passed on to another person. If that happened, the adept would disobey the commandment of loving God with all his or her soul.
