Precision Marketing Sandra Zoratti, Lee Gallagher, 2012-05-03 Marketers around the globe are recognizing that increasing customization and precision is critical to their commercial success. Rather than devoting marketing budgets to mass campaigns, precision marketers are mining customer data for predispositions and propensities to spend in order to target buyers in more sophisticated ways where all communications are targeted and relevant to each individual recipient. Precision Marketing will help you to develop the perspectives, capabilities, and skills necessary to deliver these more powerful marketing results. Drawing on case studies from companies such as Fiat, Amazon, Tesco, and ING, Precision Marketing shows how today's leading performers are beginning to recognize, identify, and capitalize on many of the concepts of precision marketing to set themselves apart and reach a whole new level of growth.

Finance Ethics John R. Boatright, 2010-08-13 A groundbreaking exploration of the critical ethical issues in financial theory and practice. Compiled by volume editor John Boatright, Finance Ethics consists of contributions from scholars from many different finance disciplines. It covers key issues in financial markets, financial services, financial management, and finance theory and includes chapters on market regulation, due diligence, reputational risk, insider trading, derivative contracts, hedge funds, mutual and pension funds, insurance, socially responsible investing, microfinance, earnings management, risk management, bankruptcy, executive compensation, hostile takeovers, and boards of directors. Special attention is given to fairness in markets and the delivery of financial services and to the duties of fiduciaries and agents. Rigorous analysis of the topics covered provides essential information and practical guidance for practitioners in finance as well as for students and academics with an interest in finance ethics. Ethics in Finance skillfully explains the need for ethics in the personal conduct of finance professionals and the operation of financial markets and institutions.

State of knowledge on gender and resilience Bryan, Elizabeth, 2022-02-22 Resource-poor people face multiple risks and disturbances across social, economic, health, political, and environmental spheres. Included among these are conflict, public health threats, corruption, climate change, and natural resource degradation. The concept of resilience provides a useful framework for considering potential solutions to these intersecting challenges. This is particularly the case in situations where structural problems and inequalities such as chronic poverty and gender gaps underlie persistent and recurring shocks. Growing evidence shows that men and women have different exposure to shocks and stressors and different preferences and capacities in terms of their responses. This stems from gendered social, cultural, and institutional contexts that shape such factors as their livelihood activities, roles, and bargaining power. Importantly, these factors are intrinsically linked with women's empowerment levels, including their ability to access resources and make strategic life choices to improve their overall wellbeing. Because shocks and stressors occur in local contexts with different power structures, institutions, and sociocultural norms, it is difficult to generalize the different ways men and women are affected and choose to respond. Men's and women's experiences and reactions largely depend on the types of overlapping shocks and stressors they are exposed to This brief highlights some of the key gendered dimensions of resilience drawing on evidence from the literature including systematic reviews and global indicators where available as well as case study examples that highlight important linkages The evidence summarized is intended to guide the development and implementation of gender sensitive resilience interventions focusing on key programming areas of interest to Feed the Future s Center for Resilience The Sample Case ,1923 Congressional Record United States.
