Rashotte,2012-12-06 For ten days a number of neuroscientists met at Reisingburg to attend a series of lectures and discussions an Institute on animal learning The students were drawn from a wide variety of disciplines including anatomy biochemistry pharmacology physiology and zoology It is probably true to say that many of them had at best a sketchy knowledge about the learning behavior of animals about the conditions which are necessary for learning to take place and about the theories that psychologists have constructed about the learning processes Was the Institute of any benefit to those neuroscientists whose interests lay in studying the functioning of the nervous system by manipulating it or probing it in some direct way Some twenty years ago the answer to this question would probably have been No and there is a very good reason why this view might have been held especially by students of the mammalian nervous system At that time most investigators used anaesthetised animals or animals immobilized in some other way such as by surgically isolating the brain from the spinal cord by dividing the brain at various levels or through the use of paralyzing agents These conditions achieved two things On the one hand they allowed substantial advances to be made particularly in the analysis of sensory processing and in the analysis of the neuronal mechanisms of relatively simple reflex action On the other hand the experimental conditions virtually eliminated complex behavior Animal Learning & Behavior ,1984 Preliminary
