Animal Eyes Michael F. Land, Dan-Eric Nilsson, 2012-03 This book covers the way that all known types of eyes work from their optics to the behaviour they guide The ways that eyes sample the world in space and time are considered and the evolutionary origins of eyes are discussed This new edition incorporates discoveries made since the first edition published in 2001

Animal Models in Eye Research, 2011-04-28 The eye is a complex sensory organ which enables visual perception of the world Thus the eye has several tissues that do different tasks One of the most basic aspects of eye function is the sensitivity of cells to light and its transduction through the optic nerve to the brain Different organisms use different ways to achieve these tasks In this sense eye function becomes a very important evolutionary aspect as well This book presents the different animal models that are commonly used for eye research and their uniqueness in evaluating different aspects of eye development evolution physiology and disease Presents information on the major animal models used in eye research including invertebrates and vertebrates Provides researchers with information needed to choose between model organisms Includes an introductory chapter on the different types of eyes stressing possible common molecular machinery

Animal Eyes Michael F. Land, Dan-Eric Nilsson, 2002 Animal Eyes aims to provide a comprehensive account of all known types of eye It takes the diversity of optical mechanisms as a framework but many other aspects of the structure and function of eyes are examined Visual ecology for example the way that eyes are specifically adapted to the lifestyles of the animals that bear them is another important theme The design philosophy of eyes is explored too what are the physical constraints on the way that an eye performs its functions and how are these addressed by the different types of eye Early and closing chapters look at the properties of light critical to vision and factors in eye adaptation like spatial resolution sensitivity and movement while the central sections assess the capabilities of a wide variety of eye types
